AS this volume goes to press, it is a pleasant duty to acknowledge the help which has lightened the labour of producing it. Mr. T. J. Wise, generous as ever, deposited for our use in the Bodleian his beautiful first Quartos of Volpone, The Alchemist, and Catiline. The Quarto of The Alchemist belonging to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, was also deposited there by the librarian, Dr. J. G. Milne. Mr. H. L. Ford lent his two large-paper copies of the 1616 Folio. The Committee of the Clifton Shakespere Society, through their librarian, Mr. H. W. Crundell, lent their copy of the Quarto of The Alchemist. The opportunity thus given for leisurely collation and verification is of the utmost value to an editor. Equally helpful were the rotograph of the Quarto of Catiline in the Cambridge University Library, taken by permission of the librarian, Mr. A. F. Scholfield, and the photostat of the Harvard copy of Epicoene, taken by permission of the librarian, Mr. A. C. Potter.

For permission to photograph title-pages we have to thank the authorities of the British Museum and the Bodleian, and two Oxford librarians, Sir Charles Oman of All Souls College, and Mr. C. H. Wilkinson of Worcester College.

For the frontispiece of the newly acquired painting of Ben Jonson in the National Portrait Gallery

we are indebted to the Trustees. The comments and elucidation of the Director and Keeper, Mr. Henry M. Hake, furnish the substance of an important note which we print on this painting.

For help on textual points we are specially indebted to Dr. W. W. Greg, who gave valuable help with Volpone and the problem of the missing Quarto of Epicoene. Mr. C. E. Batey, of the Oxford University Press, advised us on some acute difficulties of typography. By the courtesy of Mr. Philip Robinson we obtained from the American collector, Mr. Frank Capra, a photostat of some special pages of his large-paper copy of the 1616 Folio. Mr. C. K. Edmonds supplied some readings in the Quarto text of Catiline not found in the copies which we have collated. Mrs. Simpson has again given valuable help in collating and in checking the proofs.

For the readjustment of the readings in the Quarto of Cynthia's Revels, printed in the supplementary notes at the end of the volume, we are indebted to the scholarly help of Mr. A. K. McIlwraith.

With each new volume we are conscious more and more of the debt we owe to the printing staff of the Oxford University Press for the way they have handled proofs which make a severe call on their skill and patience.

The Editor acknowledges with much gratitude the grant of a Leverhulme Research Fellowship made by the late Lord Leverhulme's Trustees for the two years 1935 to 1937, to give him leisure to complete his work on the text of Jonson. It has quickened the last stage of preparation of the text as nothing else has done since he undertook the edition. It has also enabled him to prepare the text of the sixth volume, which is virtually ready for the printer.

VOLUME V

THE PORTRAIT Frontispiece

In 1935 the National Portrait Gallery acquired a painting of Ben Jonson, which, by kind permission of the Trustees, is reproduced as a frontispiece to the present volume. It is stated to have been formerly in the collection of the Webb family at Odstock House in Wiltshire, but its earlier history has not been traced. It is fortunate that it has now found a permanent home in the national collection.

The portraits of Jonson which have come down to us all conform to a single type. It is a testimony to the high place which he held in the world of letters that over twenty copies should have been made, if not in his lifetime, at least shortly after his death. A likely date for Jonson to have given a sitting to a painter is not long before the stroke which crippled him in November or December, 1628; by that time, even if his literary powers were failing, his fame was secure. The author of Volpone and The Alchemist, the 'rare Ben Jonson' acclaimed by a whole-hearted admirer after a performance of Bartholomew Fair, the 'arch-poet' who presided over the 'lyric feasts' at the Dog, the Sun, the Three Tuns, and in the Apollo room at the Devil, was one of the best-known figures of contemporary London.

The artist to whom this type of portrait is usually ascribed is Gerard Honthorst. A fine example is the painting in Lord Sackville's collection at Knole, which was reproduced as the frontispiece to our first volume. The attribution to Honthorst appears to have been first made by George Vertue in 1711 when he engraved a bust from a painting in the collection of Lord Somers. The ascription is not without its difficulties. The fine collection of Lord Somers was dispersed after his death, and it is not known what became of the original painting. Further Honthorst was in England only for six months, from June to December, 1628, and he was engaged not only in painting elaborate groups of royal or noble families, such as that of the first Duke of Buckingham and his family in the National Portrait Gallery, but also in the decoration of Whitehall. King Charles worked him hard, and Jonson broke down while he was still in England.

Since only one type of Jonson's features has been handed down to us in a large number of reproductions, there must have been an archetype taken from the life, but whether this was a painting in oils on canvas or a drawing is not likely to be determined now. It has been claimed for the new acquisition of the National Portrait Gallery that it is this original, but in the absence of any real body of similar oil sketches of the period the question remains open. It is true to say with The Times critic¹ that the portrait has traces of hesitation and clumsiness in the painting which would not be expected in a copy; the portrait has also an air of 'aliveness' which copies tend to lose. Out of the twenty odd versions known it is the best which has so far come to light and therefore the nearest we possess to a living likeness of Jonson.

The earliest dated likeness of him is the engraved portrait by Robert Vaughan, which was used as frontispiece for the Benson quarto of the Execration against Vulcan. With divers Epigrams in 1640, and later in the year as the frontispiece to the first volume of the 1640 Folio. It was issued earlier as a separate print, and cannot be later than 1627. It was reproduced, with a note on its history, in our third volume. Mr. Henry M. Hake, the Director of the National Portrait Gallery, has made an expert examination of the relation of the painting to the engraving. 'In the painting', he writes, 'the head is turned to the right and in the engraving to the left, but the set of the head inside the linen collar is very similar. The engraving shews two loops of the string which fastens the linen collar; the painting shews something like the beginning of one loop. The engraving has a cloak over the left shoulder. In the painting there is something which may be meant for a cloak over the left shoulder. If the engraving is reversed from a drawing, the cloak on that drawing might be expected on the right shoulder. The painting shews the head turned in the opposite direction and the cloak in the same direction as the engraving. The features are very close, especially the shape of the nose.'

The short black curls of the painting and the thin beard look older in the engraving; Jonson's beard had been satirized by Dekker in 1601: 'thou hast such a terrible mouth that the beard's afraid to peep out.'¹ The engraving has the poet's laurel wreath round the head, a decorative feature which rather obscures the treatment of the hair. 'So far as one can see the hair underneath it', Mr. Hake comments, 'the growth corresponds to the growth which is shown in the painting. The engraving shews a black silk doublet buttoning down the front: if the garment in the painting is intended to be a doublet, the buttons, which are also black, have sunk away. But the doublet of the engraving may be only a conventional embellishment.'

THE TEXT: INTRODUCTORY NOTES

IN the present volume we reach the end of a definite stage in the text of Jonson's plays. It includes the masterpieces and the play of Catiline, which was the last to be printed in the authoritative Folio of 1616. This is the basis of our text. The folio text of Epicoene, or The Silent Woman is the earliest we possess; if that play was printed in quarto in 1612, no copy is now known. The other plays were first printed in quarto, Volpone in 1606, The Alchemist in 1610, and Catiline in 1611. Jonson revised these texts for the Folio, but with a more sparing hand than in his earlier plays. There is nothing that can be called re-writing, no insertion of new scenes, but only occasional retouchings of word or phrase. He was at the height of his powers, and even his keen critical mind found little to reject or alter. One after-effect of this was that his proof-reading was less rigorous. Further, the punctuation of the later plays is much freer than was usual with Jonson, and also less correct.

Seven copies of the Folio of 1616 have been collated for the text of the present edition: two in the British Museum, two in Bodley, and three belonging to the Editor. For the Folio reprint of 1640, two copies belonging to the Editor have been collated, and copies in public libraries have been consulted whenever a reading seemed doubtful. The Quarto texts which have been collated are noticed in detail in the introduction to the separate plays.

The following symbols and abbreviations are used in the critical apparatus:

F1 = the Folio of 1616.

F2 = the Folio of 1640.

Ff = readings common to the Folios of 1616 and 1640.

F3 = the Folio of 1692.

Q = the first Quarto.

Q2 = the second Quarto.

W = Whalley's edition of 1756.

G = Gifford's edition of 1816.

om. = an earlier reading omitted from a later text.

not in Q = a new reading first found in the 1616 Folio.

corr. Q or corr. F is a formula used to indicate author's or printer's correction, the earlier reading being indicated by Q originally or F originally.

Re in the critical apparatus of Epicoene = readings in the reset quire Yy of the 1616 Folio (Act I, and Act II up to scene ii, line 64) described on pages 148-9.

In stage directions add Q indicates a brief direction such as 'Exit.' printed at the end of a line; a stage direction centred in the text and taking up a line by itself is indicated by 'After . . .' and the line number of the end of the preceding speech.

Words inserted in the text by the Editor are enclosed in conical brackets; words wrongly inserted or retained in the original text are enclosed in square brackets to show that they should be deleted.

Gifford's scene-numberings and scene-location are quoted in the critical apparatus, and also his stage directions, except where they are identical with the marginal directions in the Folio.

VOLPONE or THE FOX

THE TEXT

THE comedy of Volpone, or The Fox, stated on the Folio title-page to have been 'Acted in the yeere 1605', was published by Thomas Thorpe in 1607. The printer is unknown. Thorpe had published Sejanus in 1605, the copyright of which had been transferred to him by Edward Blount on 6 August. On 4 September he had entered Eastward Hoe along with William Aspley, though only Aspley's name appeared on the title-page. On 21 April 1608 he entered The Masques of Blackness and of Beauty, which he published in that year, and followed these with Hymenaei, the signatures of which are continuous with those of the two masques. From 1605 to 1608, therefore, he was Jonson's publisher. The date 1607 on the title-page of the Volpone Quarto is probably a calendar date, i.e. beginning the year on 1 January.¹ If so, the play was printed early in the year. But Thorpe did not enter it on the Stationers' Register till he transferred it along with Sejanus on 3 October 1610 to Walter Burre, the publisher of The Alchemist. The entry is as follows:

3^o Octobris.

Walter Burre Entred for his Copyes by assignemente from Thomas Thorpe and with the consente of Th'wardens vnder their handes, 2 bookes thone called, Seianus his fall, thother, Vulpone or the

Arber, Transcript, III. 445.

Following the precedent of the Sejanus Quarto, Jonson prefaced the play with verse tributes from his friends. Very appropriately Donne, Chapman, Beaumont, and Fletcher² were among the eulogists of this great play. There was ¹ See W. W. Greg, 'The Riddle of Jonson's Chronology', in The Library, fourth series, vol. vi, pp. 340-7.

² So we interpret the initials 'I F' here and in the similar copy contributed to the Quarto of Catiline. The suggestion that the writer was John Florio (made in The Times Literary Supplement of 17 January 1918, and accepted by Miss Yates in her monograph on Florio) is plausible for Volpone, but less likely for Catiline. Dyce accepted Fletcher's authorship in his edition of Beaumont and Fletcher.

shrewd critical insight in Edmund Bolton's comment that Jonson had rehandled the ancient drama 'Tanquam explorator' and Donne's tribute—

*Tam nemo veterum est sequutor, ut tu

They saw that he was no blind copyist of the classics.

The collation—two preliminary leaves, four leaves of ¶, A to N in fours, two leaves of O—is in detail: first preliminary leaf blank, preserved in the British Museum copy with the inscription to Florio and in the Cottrell-Dormer copy sold by T. Thorp in 1925; second preliminary leaf, the title with verso blank; ¶ recto, the Dedication; ¶ verso to ¶ 4 recto, the Epistle; ¶ 4 verso, 'E. B.', i.e. Edmund Bolton, 'AD VTRAMQVE ACADEMIAM'; A recto, 'I. D.', i.e. John Donne, 'Amicissimo, & meritissimo BEN: IONSON'; A verso, 'To my friend M^r. IONSON. EPIGRAMME' and 'To the Reader. Vpon the worke.', the latter signed 'T. R.'; A 2 recto, 'F. B.', i.e. Francis Beaumont, 'To my deare friend, M^r. Beniamin Ionson, vpon his FOXE.'; A 2 verso, 'D. D.', probably Dudley Digges, 'To my good friend. M^r. Ionson.' and 'I. C.', 'To the ingenious Poet.'; A 3 recto, 'G. C.', i.e. George Chapman, 'To his deare Friend, Beniamin Ionson'; A 3 verso, 'E. S.', conjectured by Gifford to be Edward Scory, 'To my worthily-esteemed M^r. Ben: Ionson.', and 'I. F.', i.e. John Fletcher, 'To the true M^r. in his Art, B. Ionson.'; A 4 recto, 'THE PERSONS OF THE COMOEDYE', and 'THE ARGVMENT.'; A 4 verso, 'The PROLOGVE'; B to N and one leaf of O, the text of the play; O 2 blank, preserved in the Cottrell-Dormer copy.

This is the normal collation of the Quarto, giving sheet A as finally adjusted by the compositor. He had made an error in perfecting the inner forme of A, putting signature A 2 at the foot of what should be A 4. The result was that he had printed the inner forme the wrong way round in respect to the outer forme. This blunder is preserved in Mr. T. J. Wise's copy, which gives this absurd arrangement:

A verso, Scory's and Fletcher's poems; A 2, 'THE PERSONS OF THE COMOEDYE' and 'THE ARGVMENT'; A 3 verso, T. R.'s lines preceded by the unsigned 'EPIGRAMME'; A 4, Beaumont's verses. One other copy, once Mr. W. A. White's, is recorded with this dislocation. Probably the error was discovered at once when the sheet was folded; the signature was then rectified in the course of printing.

This is not the only variation of sheet A. A set of verses signed 'N. F.' was added to the preliminary tributes after the sheet had been set up. It survives in two copies, Mr. Wise's and the British Museum copy with the autograph dedication to Florio. In the Museum copy it is inserted between the original A 3 verso and A 4, before the last leaf containing the 'The Persons of the Comedy', 'The Argument', and 'The Prologue', which thus becomes A 5: this was the proper place for it. But in the Wise copy it is inserted in the middle of the sheet between A 2 verso and the original A 3 with Chapman's verses.

'N. F.' is Nathan Field. The opening lines of his tribute to his 'worthiest Maister' explain that this poem was an afterthought.

For mee, your Worke or you, most worthy Friend, (Mongst these vn-æquall'd Men) to dare commend,
Were damnable presumption; whose weake flame
Can neither dimme, or light your full grow'n fame:
How can my common knowledge set you forth,
When it wants art, and Art it selfe wants worth?
Therefore, how vaine (although by you, made one) Am I, to put such saucy boldnesse on
To send you Verses?

The verses were therefore written at Jonson's request. Field had acted in two plays of Jonson before this, Cynthia's Revels and Poetaster. 'Nid field', Jonson told Drummond, 'was his Schollar & he had read to him the Satyres of Horace & some Epigrammes of Martiall.'¹ Verses by Field are prefixed to The Faithful Shepherdess, initial-signed in the first edition, which appeared in 1609 or 1610, and to Jonson's Catiline in the quarto of 1611. The lines before Volpone are thus the earliest verses yet traced to him; their modest tone, not unfitting a young writer who appeared in the company of famous contemporaries, has something of the youthful, almost boyish, note which charms us in his writings. It adds a new and kindly glimpse to what we know of his relations with Jonson, that the great dramatist, amid the homage paid to a brilliant and successful play, sought the tribute of the young actor who revered him. In the equally modest verses to his 'loved friend', John Fletcher, on The Faithful Shepherdess, Field had a significant allusion, which has passed unnoticed, to Jonson:

¹ Drummond Conversations, ll. 164-5: see vol. 1, p. 137.

Opinion, that great foole, makes fooles of all,
And (once) I feard her till I met a minde
Whose graue instructions philosophicall,
Toss'd it like dust vpon a March strong winde,
He shall for euer my example be,
And his embraced doctrine grow in me.

Seven copies of the Quarto have been collated for the text of the present edition:

(1) The British Museum copy with press-mark C. 12. e. 17: this was the copy which Jonson gave to John Florio, with an autograph inscription styling him 'his louing Father, & worthy Freind, . . . The ayde of his Muses'.¹ It has the autograph of 'Mary Leigh' at the foot of the title-page and the bookplate of Charles Chauncy, and came from the library of George III (marked A in the following list).

(2) The British Museum copy with press-mark C. 34. d. 2, formerly the Garrick copy (marked B).

(3) The Bodleian copy with press-mark Malone 809 (marked C).

(4) An imperfect copy in Bodley, Malone 225 (4), with the title-page and the last leaf in manuscript (marked D).

(5) The Dyce copy at South Kensington, formerly the Heber copy (marked E).

(6) Mr. T. J. Wise's copy (marked F).

(7) An imperfect copy belonging to the Clifton Shakspeare Society, wanting the two first leaves and signature O, the text of which is supplied in an early seventeenth-century hand (marked G).

The following corrections were made by Jonson while the sheets were passing through the press:

Signature F is misprinted E in A, C, and G, and signature K 3 is not marked.

There are no changes of reading, nothing in fact but press-corrections. Some of them, such as 'Catarrhe', 'a racted', or the dropped letter of III. ix. 28, 29, might have been made by the compositor, but a correction in punctuation such as 'returne, Ten-fold, vpon them' in i. i. 80-1, and the correction of the mis-spelt 'Harpyeis' in i. ii. 122, show unmistakably the hand of Jonson.

The printing of the Quarto has one peculiar feature—its use of accents. Where they indicate the pronunciation of Italian words, they undoubtedly come from Jonson, as 'Romagnia' (I. i. 58), 'Osteria' (II. vi. 15), 'Soria' (IV. i. 102); and to these may be added 'Montagnie' (III. iv. 90). The Folio keeps 'Romagnia' and 'Soria', and adds 'procuratia' (II. ii. 36) to the examples found in the Quarto. But the Quarto also has such preposterous pointing as 'alóne' (Epistle, 29); 'Before the bést houndes, thou dost, still, but play' in Chapman's preliminary verses; 'Gentlewóman' five times;¹ 'wóman-kind' (v. ii. 11); 'Hé' (v. iii. 26, xi. 6); 'Bút' (v. xii. 5). And there are a few others. Why Jonson passed these oddities is a mystery.

² The 'I' had dropped from the previous line.

The play was next printed by William Stansby in the Folio of 1616 from a carefully corrected copy of the Quarto. Purely textual changes are slight. It is significant that, when Jonson returned to his play after such an interval, he found nothing to recast. He excised, of course, from the dedicatory Epistle the allusion to the preface of his still-unpublished notes on the Ars Poetica.² But other changes are only verbal—'filth' for 'garbage', in the dedicatory epistle, l. 89; 'goodnesse' for 'vertue' in IV. v. 43; 'catholique' for 'Christian' (ibid., 130); 'Fitted' for 'Apted' in v. iv. 55. On the other hand, he worked minutely over the punctuation, recasting it systematically, especially in the longer speeches; most of his changes are recorded in the critical apparatus. He inserted a number of stage directions, and he used the interjection, parenthesis bracket, and the dash more freely. In one speech, however, he put in his cold, logical punctuation where the Quarto suggests a hurried delivery for the actor: it is Celia's cry of agony when she flings herself at Volpone's feet and implores him to spare her.³

If you haue eares, that will be pierc'd—or eyes,
That can be open'd—a heart, may be touch'd—
Or any part, that yet sounds man, about you—

¹ IV. ii. 34, 39; iii. 15; v. 3; v. xii. 3.

³ III. vii. 240-6, and similarly in the later lines.

If you haue touch of holy Saints—or Heauen—
Do mee the grace, to let me scape—if not,
Be bountifull, and kill mee—you do knowe,
I am a creature, hether ill betrayed, . . .

Except in the mere point of formal presentment Jonson felt he could not improve on his original text.

A few corrections of the Folio text have been made on the authority of the Quarto: the chief are 'osteria' in II. vi. 15, 'TASSO?' or 'DANTE?' in III. iv. 79, and 'I'am past already!' in III. vii. 81. The accent and the metrical apostrophes were omitted by Stansby's compositor, and Jonson overlooked the omission.¹

The Folio of 1640, printed by Richard Bishop, is a slightly inferior text. It tends to modernize both spelling and punctuation, using the semicolon more frequently. It was set up from an uncorrected copy of the 1616 Folio. The practice of gathering up the uncorrected sheets and binding them impartially with the corrected, is invaluable for tracing the stages of correction when an author read his proofs, but it had its disadvantages if they were bound up for what we may call the office copy and used for a reprint.

The 1640 text has some careless errors. Examples are 'masc'line enter-ludes' in the Epistle, l. 87, for 'misc'line', which puzzled the printer, who had not heard of ludi miscelli; 'keep up thy station' in I. ii. 52, for 'take up', which seems purely arbitrary; 'dispositions' for 'depositions' in II. ii. 139, and 'brought' for 'bought' in III. vii. 195. More serious is the omission of lines: in v. viii. 19, 20, the 1616 text
You shall perceiue, sir, I dare beate you. Approch.

V O L P. No haste, sir, I doe know your valure, well:

is shortened to

You shall perceive, sir, I doe know your valure, well.

Similarly in v. x. 8-12:

(C O R V. Will he betray himselfe?) V O L T. Whom, equally,

¹ For the metrical apostrophe see vol. iv, pp. 338-40.

I haue abus'd, out of most couetous endes—

(CORV. The man is mad! CORB. What's that?

CORV. He is possest.)

VOLT. For which; now strooke in conscience, here I prostrate

My selfe, at your offended feete, for pardon.—

the 1640 text left out the second and third of these lines.

One reading of this Folio, however, is an ingenious emendation—'Yea fright all aches from your bones?' in Nano's song (II. ii. 203) for 'Yet fright' in the earlier texts. Whalley printed 'Yea', but Gifford restored the original reading.

The Quarto text was reprinted in 1898 with a frontispiece of Volpone adoring his treasures, five initial letters, and a cover design by Aubrey Beardsley, who had planned twenty-four drawings to illustrate the play; Vincent O'Sullivan prefixed a critical essay on Jonson, and Robert Ross wrote a eulogy of the artist.

The Folio text has also been reprinted. In 1906 Horace Hart privately printed the play as a doctorate thesis of Paris by Henry Blackstone Wilkins; the verse-lining and the punctuation are erratic, though there are no serious errors in the text. W. Bang's scholarly reprint of the Folio in his Materialien zur Kunde des älteren englischen Dramas, included Volpone in his seventh volume, the second part of which was issued in 1908; it was his last complete play: he stopped short at the beginning of the third act of Epicoene. Dr. John D. Rea also reprinted the Folio text in Yale Studies in English, volume lix, in 1919, from a copy in the Library of Congress, collated with the Yale copies of the Quarto and the Folio and a Folio copy in the University of Pennsylvania; he noted some variant readings of the Folio. He ignored the 1640 Folio, but collated Gifford, with the result that he credited Gifford with being the author of some of the 1640 readings.

 There follows an Epistle, if you dare venture on the length. Q

NEuer (most equall SISTERS) had any man a wit so presently excellent, as that it could raise it selfe; but there must come both matter, occasion, commendrs, and fauourers to it: If this be true, and that the fortune of all writers doth daily proue it, it behoues the carefull to prouide, well, toward 5 these accidents; and, hauing acquir'd them, to preserue that part of reputation most tenderly, wherein the benefit of a friend is also defended. Hence is it, that I now render my selfe gratefull, and am studious to iustifie the bounty of your act: to which, though your mere authority were satisfying, yet, it being 10 an age, wherein Poetrie, and the Professors of it heare so ill, on all sides, there will a reason bee look'd for in the subiect.
 It is certayne, nor can it with any fore-head be oppos'd, that the too-much licence of Poetasters, in this time, hath much deform'd their Mistris; that, euery day, their manifold, and 15 manifest ignorance, doth sticke vnnaturall reproches vpon her:
 But for their petulancy, it were an act of the greatest iniustice, either to let the learned suffer; or so diuine a skill (which indeed should not bee attempted with vncleane hands) to fall, vnder the least contempt. For, if men will impartially, and not à-squint, 20 looke toward the offices, and function of a Poet, they will easily conclude to themselues, the impossibility of any mans being the good Poet, without first being a good man. He that is said to be able to informe yong-men to all good disciplines, inflame growne-men to all great vertues, keepe old-men in their best and 25 supreme state, or as they decline to child-hood, recouer them to their first strength; that comes forth the interpreter, and arbiter of nature, a teacher of things diuine, no lesse then humane, a master in manners; and can alone (or with a few) effect the businesse of man-kind: this, I take him, is no subiect for pride, 30 and ignorance to exercise their rayling rhetorique vpon. But, the text in roman.

it will here be hastily answer'd, that the writers of these dayes are other things; that, not only their manners, but their natures are inuerted; and nothing remayning with them of the dignitie 35 of Poet, but the abused name, which euery Scribe vsurps: that now, especially in dramattick, or (as they terme it) stage-poetrie, nothing but ribaldry, profanation, blasphemy, all licence of offence to god, and man, is practis'd. I dare not denie a great part of this (and am sorry, I dare not) because 40 in some mens abortiue features (and would they had neuer boasted the light) it is ouer-true: But, that all are embarqu'd in this bold aduenture for hell, is a most vncharitable thought, and, vtter'd, a more malicious slander. For my particular,
 I can (and from a most cleare conscience) affirme, that I haue 45 euer trembled to thinke toward the least prophanenesse; haue lothed the use of such foule, and vn-wash'd baurd'y, as is now made the foode of the scene. And, howsoeuer I cannot escape, from some, the imputation of sharpnesse, but that they will say,
 I haue taken a pride, or lust, to be bitter, and not my yongest 50 infant but hath come into the world with all his teeth; I would aske of these supercilious politiques, what nation, societie, or generall order, or state I haue prouok'd? what publique person? whether I haue not (in all these) preseru'd their dignitie, as mine owne person, safe? My workes are read, allow'd, (I 55 speake of those that are intirely mine) looke into them: What broad reproofes haue I vs'd? Where haue I beene particular?
 Where personall? except to a mimick, cheater, bawd, or buffon, creatures (for their insolencies) worthy to be tax'd? Yet, to which of these so pointingly, as he might not, either ingenuously 60 haue confest, or wisely dissembled his disease? But it is not rumour can make men guiltie, much lesse entitle me, to other mens crimes. I know, that nothing can bee so innocently writ, or carryed, but may be made obnoxious to construction; mary, whil'st I beare mine innocence about mee, I feare it not.

that professe to haue a key for the decyphering of euery thing: but let wise and noble persons take heed how they be too credulous, or giue leaue to these inuading interpreters, to bee ouer-familiar with their fames, who cunningly, and often, utter their owne virulent malice, vnder other mens simplest meanings. As ⁷⁰ for those, that will (by faults which charitie hath rak'd vp, or common honestie conceal'd) make themselues a name with the multitude, or (to draw their rude, and beastly claps) care not whose liuing faces they intrench, with their petulant stiles; may they doe it, without a riual, for me: I choose rather to liue ⁷⁵ grau'd in obscuritie, then share with them, in so preposterous a fame. Nor can I blame the wishes of those seuer, and wiser patriots, who prouiding the hurts these licentious spirits may doe in a state, desire rather to see fooles, and deuils, and those antique reliques of barbarisme retriu'd, with all other ridicu- ⁸⁰ lous, and exploded follies: then behold the wounds of priuate men, of princes, and nations. I cannot but be serious in a cause of this nature, wherein my fame, and the reputations of diuers honest, and learned are the question; when ⁹⁵ a Name, so ful of authority, antiquity, and all great marke, is (through their insolence) become the lowest scorne of the age:

and those men subiect to the petulancy of euery vernaculous Orator, that were wont to bee the care of Kings, and happiest 100 Monarchs. This it is, that hath not only rap't me to present indignation, but made me studious, heretofore; and, by all my actions, to stand off, from them: which may most appeare in this my latest worke (which you, most learned ARBITRESSES, haue seene, iudg'd, and to my crowne, approu'd) wherein I 105 haue labour'd, for their instruction, and amendment, to reduce, not only the ancient formes, but manners of the scene, the easinesse, the propriety, the innocence, and last the doctrine, which is the principall end of poesie, to informe men, in the best reason of liuing. And though my catastrophe may, in 110 the strict rigour of comick law, meet with censure, as turning back to my promise; I desire the learned, and charitable critick to haue so much faith in me, to thinke it was done off industrie: For, with what ease I could haue varied it, neerer his scale (but that I feare to boast my owne faculty) I could here insert.
 115 But my speciall ayme being to put the snaffle in their mouths, that crie out, we neuer punish vice in our enterludes, &c. I tooke the more liberty; though not without some lines of example, drawne euen in the ancients themselues, the goings out of whose comœdies are not alwaies ioyfull, but oft-times,

THE ARGUMENT.

VOLPONE, childlesse, rich, faines sicke, despaires, Offers his state to hopes of severall heires,
Lies languishing; His Parasite receaues
Presents of all, assures, deludes: Then weaues
Other crosse-plots, which ope' themselues, are told. 5
New tricks for safety, are sought; they thrieve: When, bold,
Each tempts th'other againe, and all are sold.

PROLOGVE

NOW, luck yet send vs, and a little wit
Will serue, to make our play hit;
(According to the palates of the season)
Here is ri'me, not emptie of reason:
This we were bid to credit, from our Poet, 5
Whose true scope, if you would know it,
In all his poemes, stil, hath been this measure,
To mixe profit, with your pleasure;
And not as some (whose throats their enuy fayling)
Cry hoarsely, all he writes, is rayling: 10
And, when his playes come forth, thinke they can flout them,

- With saying, he was a yeere about them.
 To these there needs no lie, but this his creature,
 Which was, two months since, no feature ;
 15 And, though he dares giue them fīue liues to mend it,
 'Tis knowne, fīue weekes fully pen'd it :
 From his owne hand, without a co-adiutor,
 Nouice, iourney-man, or tutor.
 Yet, thus much I can giue you, as a token 20 Of his playes worth, no egges are broken ;
 Nor quaking custards with fierce teeth affrighted,
 Wherewith your rout are so delighted ;
 Nor hailes he in a gull, old ends reciting,
 To stop gaps in his loose writing ;
 25 With such a deale of monstrous, and forc'd action :
 As might make Bet'lem a faction :
 Nor made he his play, for iests, stolne from each table,
 But makes iests, to fit his fable.
 And, so presents quick comædie, refined, 30 As best Criticks haue designed,
 The lawes of time, place, persons he obserueth,
 From no needfull rule he swerueth.
 All gall, and coppresse, from his inke, he drayneth,
 Onely, a little salt remayneth ;
 35 Wherewith, he'll rub your cheeks, til (red with laughter)
 They shall looke fresh, a weeke after.

SONG.

- Fooles, they are the onely nation
 Worth mens enuy, or admiration ;
 Free from care, or sorrow-taking,
 Selues, and others merry-making :
 70 All they speake, or doe, is sterling.
 Your Foole, he is your great mans dearling,
 And your ladies sport, and pleasure ;
 Tongue, and bable are his treasure.
 Eene his face begetteth laughter,
 75 And he speakes truth, free from slaughter ;
 Hee's the grace of euery feast,
 And, sometimes, the chiefest guest :
 Hath his trencher, and his stoole,
 When wit waites vpon the foole.
 80 O, who would not bee
 Hee, hee, hee ?

 Foole, be gone,
 'Tis signior V O L T O R E, the Aduocate,
 I know him, by his knock. V O L. Fetch me my gowne, 85 My furies, and night-caps ; say, my couch is changing :
 And let him entertayne himselfe, awhile,
 Without i' th' gallerie. Now, now, my clients
 Beginne their visitation ! vulture, kite,
 Rauen, and gor-crow, all my birds of prey,
 90 That thinke me turning carcasse, now they come :
 I am not for 'hem yet. How now ? the newes ?
 M O S. A piece of plate, sir. V O L. Of what bignesse ?

V O L P. No more. Gentlemen, if I had but time to discourse 135 to you the miraculous effects of this my oile, surnamed oglio del S C O T O ; with the count-lesse catalogue of those I haue cured of th'aforesaid, and many more diseases ; the pattents and priuiledges of all the Princes, and common-wealths of Christendome ; or but the depositions of those that appear'd 140 on my part, before the signiory of the Sanitâ, and most learned collodge of physitians ; where I was authorized, vpon notice taken of the admirable vertues of my medicaments, and mine owne excellency, in matter of rare, and vnknowne secrets, not onely to disperse them publiquely in this famous citie, but in 145 all the territories, that happily ioy vnder the gouvernement of the most pious and magnificent states of Italy. But may some other gallant fellow say, O, there be diuers, that make profession to haue as good, and as experimented receipts, as yours :
 Indeed, very many haue assay'd, like apes in imitation of that, 150 which is really and essentially in mee, to make of this oyle ;
 bestow'd great cost in furnaces, stilles, alembeks, continuall fires, and preparation of the ingredients, (as indeede there goes to it sixe hundred seuerall simples, besides some quantity of humane fat, for the conglutination, which we buy of the anato-blow, blow, puff, puff, and all flies in fumo : ha, ha, ha.

 Poore wretches ! I rather pittie their folly, and indiscretion, then their losse of time, and money ; for those may be recouered by industrie : but to bee a foole borne, is a disease incurable.
 160 For my selfe, I alwaies from my youth haue indeuour'd to get the rarest secrets, and booke them ; either in exchange, or for money : I spared nor cost, nor labour, where any thing was worthy to bee learned. And gentlemen, honourable gentlemen,

 Come, kisse me. Goe, and make thee ready straight,
 In all thy best attire, thy choicest iewells,
 15 Put 'hem all on, and, with 'hem, thy best lookes :
 We are inuited to a solemne feast,
 At old VOLPONE'S, where it shall appeare
 How far I am free, from ieaousie, or feare.

Act III. Scene I.

M O S C A.

I Feare, I shall begin to grow in loue
 With my deare selfe, and my most prosp'rous parts,
 They doe so spring, and burgeon ; I can feele
 A whimsey i' my bloud : (I know not how) 5 Successe hath made me wanton. I could skip
 Out of my skin, now, like a subtill snake,
 I am so limber. O ! Your Parasite
 Is a most precious thing, dropt from aboue,
 Not bred 'mong'st clods, and clot-poules, here on earth.
 10 I muse, the mysterie was not made a science,
 It is so liberally profest ! almost
 All the wise world is little else, in nature,
 But Parasites, or Sub-parasites. And, yet,
 I meane not those, that haue your bare towne-arte,
 15 To know, who's fit to feede 'hem ; haue no house,
 No family, no care, and therefore mould Tales for mens eares, to bait that sense ; or get Kitchin-inuention, and some stale receipts
 To please the belly, and the groine ; nor those, 20 With their court-dog-tricks, that can fawne, and fleere,
 Make their reuennue out of legs, and faces,
 Eccho my-Lord, and lick away a moath :
 But your fine, elegant rascall, that can rise,

Might not I goe into the arsenale?
Or you? come out againe? and none the wiser?
P E R. Except your selfe, sir. P O L. Goe too, then. I, therefore,
Aduertise to the state, how fit it were,
95 That none, but such as were knowne patriots,
Sound louers of their countrey, should be sufferd T'enioy them in their houses: and, euen those,
Seal'd, at some office, and, at such a bignesse,
As might not lurke in pockets. P E R. Admirable!
- 100 P O L. My next is, how t'enquire, and be resolu'd,
By present demonstration, whether a ship,
Newly arriued from Soria, or from Any suspected part of all the leuant,
Be guilty of the plague: And, where they vse, 105 To lie out fortie, fifty daies, sometimes,
About the Lazaretto, for their triall;

P O L. Nay, sir, conceiue me. 'Twill cost me, in onions, 110
Some thirtie liu'res—— P E R. Which is one pound sterling.

P O L. Beside my water-workes : for this I doe, sir.

First, I bring in your ship, 'twixt two brickwalles ;

(But those the state shall venter) on the one

I straine me a faire tarre-paulin ; and, in that, 115

I stick my onions, cut in halfes : the other

Is full of loope-holes, out at which, I thrust

The noses of my bellowes ; and, those bellowes

I keepe, with water-workes, in perpetuall motion, (Which is the easi'st matter of a hundred) 120

Now, sir, your onion, which doth naturally

Attract th'infection, and your bellowes, blowing

The ayre vpon him, will shew (instantly)

But, you ha' done well, for once, sir. P O L. Were I false,

EPICOENE or
THE SILENT WOMAN

THE TEXT

The printing and publishing of Epicoene, or The Silent Woman have some perplexing points. The play was entered on the Stationers' Register for John Browne and John Busby junior on 20 September 1610.

Ibid. 498.

The next entry is irregular, and it is cancelled.¹ On 17 February 1623 Mistress Browne, whose husband died on 10 October 1622, assigned the copyright of eleven books to John Marriott, the ninth being 'Epicoene or the silent woman', which is crossed out, with a side-note 'vide 28^o Septembris 1612'. She evidently did not know that her husband had assigned the copyright to Burre.

The next entry is also irregular.² Mistress Burre, whose husband died in 1622, assigned to John Spencer on 3 July 1630 her rights in Cynthia's Revels, The Alchemist, and Epicoene, and in six other books. For these nine books she should have paid four shillings and sixpence; she actually paid four shillings. It looks as if the registering clerk found out that she had no rights in Epicoene, and did not charge her the fee for it, but omitted to delete the entry.

During Walter Burre's lifetime Stansby had published Epicoene in folio in 1616 and reissued it in quarto in 1620. He must have had some understanding with Burre, though there is no record of it at either of these dates. He could not have ignored Burre's interest in seven plays which he printed in the Folio—Every Man in his Humour, Cynthia's Revels, Sejanus, Volpone, The Silent Woman, The Alchemist, and Catiline. But it is not till 4 July 1635 that a belated entry in the Register finally establishes his rights :

Master Stansby Entred for his Copies by vertue of a noate
under the hand of Walter Burre and master Mathew Lowndes warden bearing date the 10th of June 1621 as therby appeareth these Copies following (viz^t.) by order of a Court
iii^s vj^d

Arber, Transcript, iv. 342.

The copies are those of the seven plays. Apparently, after Stansby had published them, he judged it desirable to safeguard his rights by a formal agreement with Burre, which was submitted to the then Warden of the Stationers' Company but, for some unexplained reason, was not entered on the Register.

When was the play first published? This is a far more serious question which has been fully investigated in an important article by Dr. W. W. Greg, 'Was there a 1612 Quarto of Epicene?' contributed to The Library in December 1934 (vol. xv, pp. 306-15). Gifford stated in 1816: 'The Silent Woman was printed in quarto with this motto :

Ut sis tu similis Cæli, Byrrhique latronum, Non ego sim Capri, neque Sulci. Cur metuas me?

and went through several editions. I have one dated 1620. The Companion to the Playhouse mentions another, printed in 1609 (as does Whalley, in the margin of his copy),¹ which I have not been able to discover; the earliest which has fallen in my way, bearing the date 1612. All these are exclusive of the folio, 1616.'

For this alleged quarto of 1609, D. E. Baker's Companion to the Play-House, 1764, says 'EPICÆNE, or the silent Woman. Com. by Ben Jonson, 4^{to}. 1609'. But the date '1609' is copied from the date of performance on the title-page of the play in the Folio. Publication of an authorized text a year before it was entered in the Stationers' Register would be an extraordinary and a pointless proceeding on the part of such a man as Burre. Whalley's note is merely a copy from Baker. On the evidence we have the Quarto of 1609 may be dismissed as impossible.

It is otherwise with the missing Quarto of 1612. Gifford says he had seen it, though he never mentions it again and, contrary to his usual practice with the Quartos, he made no use of it. He does not, for example, record any disagreement with the later texts. We should expect the Quarto, if it existed, to have been published by Burre. An edition by Browne and Busby is, of course, possible; but Burre was evidently anxious to secure Jonson's plays, and the transfer of Epicoene to him in 1612 suggests that he contemplated an edition. In that year he published The Alchemist, which he had registered in 1610. Was there any reason for his holding up The Silent Woman?

There are clear signs that the play caused trouble. Jonson virtually says so in the dedication to Sir Francis Stuart and in the second prologue 'occasion'd by some persons impertinent exception' and not intended for delivery on the stage. 'Thinke nothing true', he says in the prologue; the play is pure fiction.

For he knowes, Poet neuer credit gain'd

By writing truths, but things (like truths) well fain'd.

If any, yet, will (with particular slight

Of application) wrest what he doth write;

And that he meant or him, or her, will say:

They make a libell, which he made a play.

And in the dedication he makes a statement which will reconcile us to the loss of an earlier Quarto if it had been published: 'There is not a line, or syllable in it chang'd from the simplicity of the first Copy.' If Jonson had been forced to suppress anything in that copy, it was characteristic of him to retrieve it in a later text.¹ 'And, when you shall consider,' he tells Stuart, 'through the certaine hatred of some, how much a mans innocency may bee in-danger'd by an vn-certaine accusation; you will, I doubt not, so beginne to hate the iniquitie of such natures, as I shall loue the contumely done me, whose end was so honorable, as to be wip'd off by your sentence.'

The passage which is likely to have brought Jonson into trouble was at the beginning of the fifth act, where La-Foole describes Daw as having a box of writing-materials to draw maps of euery place, and person, where he comes.

CLE. How, maps of persons!

LA-F. Yes, sir, of NOMENTACK, when he was here, and of the Prince of MOLDAVIA, and of his mistris, mistris EPICOENE.

CLE. Away! he has not found out her latitude, I hope.

The words 'his mistris' unquestionably mean Daw's mistress, but in the context and, when spoken on the stage, they could be, and apparently were, interpreted to mean the Prince of Moldavia's mistress.

This sham prince was Stephano Janiculo, sometimes called Bogdan, for 'Bugdania' was another name for Moldavia.² He visited England in 1601 and enlisted the support of Elizabeth. He went to the English embassy at Constantinople, was lured from it and imprisoned by the Turks; he escaped disguised as a woman in 1606. He came to England in 1607 and left in November; King James was fool enough to give him a grant of £300, and next year to warrant the Levant Company to spend £3,000 in securing his 'restitution'.¹ Wotton's letters from Venice to Lord Salisbury throw further light on him. On 22 February 1608 Wotton writes that Stephano has arrived in Venice and proposes to quarter himself on Wotton. Wotton found Stephano and his portmanteaux one day at the embassy and asked for his credentials from the King. 'Whereupon he asked me very wonderingly whether I had no direction touching him from your Lordship, nor from my lady Arabella'—Arabella Stuart—'with a few other wild questions.'² Wotton politely packed him off, but he announced in Venice that, when he got his principedom, he was going to marry Lady Arabella. He was a safe distance from England before he ventured on this interesting announcement. But it caused a flutter in Venice because he was already married to a Venetian lady. On 7 November 1608 Wotton further reports to Salisbury that 'Stephano Bogdan' has written from Constantinople to the Archbishop of Philadelphia at Venice to divorce him from his Venetian wife. 'The matter is come to the hearing of her friends, who make no small noise of it, and the rather for a certain report, scattered here by the said intendant at his last passage this way (when he came from England), of some motions that had passed between him and the Lady Arabella of marriage, to succeed when he should be settled in his principedom.'³ The lady's friends believed this, and pointed to James's treatment of him as corroborating the allegation.

¹ For instance, the Apologetical Dialogue to Poetaster was retrieved in the 1616 Folio (vol. iv, pp. 317 foll.).

² A full account of Stephano is given in Sir William Foster's edition of The Travels of John Sanderson in the Levant 1584-1602, pp. xxxv-vii, published by the Hakluyt Society, 1931. There is a contemporary notice of his adventures in News from Poland (1621, sigs. A 4 verso-B 4 verso), one of the countries to which he fled for refuge.

The true facts about any proposals for Lady Arabella's marriage were well known in England and are on record. As a cousin of King James she was politically important. She was kept in confinement in December 1609 for promising her hand to an unnamed suitor—probably a rich man, for she pleaded her poverty, and James pardoned her and gave her a pension.¹ On 2 February 1610 she became engaged to Sir William Seymour, and they appeared before the Privy Council and promised not to marry without the King's consent. She was granted a monopoly. But in July the pair married secretly and were imprisoned. In June 1611 she played an epicene part by escaping in boy's clothes from the Bishop of York who had charge of her, got to Blackwall and went on board a French vessel below Lee with several attendants; she was retaken at sea near Calais and lodged in the Tower.² She stayed there till her death in 1615.

Now within a week of her engagement to Seymour the Venetian ambassador on 8 February 1610 made a report which bears on Epicoene: 'Lady Arabella is seldom seen outside her rooms and lives in greater dejection than ever. She complains that in a certain comedy the play-wright introduced an allusion to her person and the part played by the Prince of Moldavia. The play was suppressed. Her Excellency is very ill-pleased and shows a determination in this coming Parliament'—which opened on 9 February—'to secure the punishment of certain persons, we don't know who.'³ Epicoene was produced at the end of 1609 or the beginning of 1610: Wotton's report of November 1608 would set the scandal about Stephano afloat in England at once, but the statement of the Venetian ambassador slightly favours the latter date. Mr. Logan Pearsall Smith was the first to suggest that the suppressed play was Epicoene;⁴ the suggestion has since been made independently by Sir E. K. Chambers.⁵ The authorities would deal promptly with any insult, real or imagined, to a royal personage. Her escapade in boy's clothes would lend colour to any rumour that she was referred to in the play.

One other passage in Epicoene betrays signs of nervousness. When Truewit disguises Cutberd as a doctor and Otter as a parson—'as able . . . and compleat . . . as may be wish'd'—Jonson adds this very undramatic proviso: 'And, I hope, without wronging the dignitie of either profession, since they are but persons put on, and for mirths sake, to torment him.'¹ The words may have been in the 'first Copy' which Jonson professed to reprint exactly, for he had got into trouble for satirizing lawyers in Poetaster.² But they read curiously like an afterthought inserted as a reply to critics.

Jonson should have had no difficulty in explaining the Moldavia allusion to the authorities when once they looked into it. But the further point arises—if they stopped the performance, would it be safe to print the passage in 1612 when Lady Arabella was in the Tower and the scandal fairly recent? By 1616 the affair was forgotten, and Jonson was just the man to let the world know what he had written, in order to show how wilfully he had been maligned.

To sum up this confusing and unsatisfactory evidence, we may say (1) it is clear that Burre at any rate intended to print the play in 1612; (2) Gifford says he had seen a quarto printed that year; (3) no one has seen it since. A quarto of 1612 would probably omit the passage supposed to reflect on Lady Arabella: that would account for Jonson's emphatic statement that the 1616 text was 'the first Copy' without the change of a line or syllable. A further clue to publication, or at least the intention to publish, in 1612 has been pointed out by Sir E. K. Chambers.³ The commendatory verses prefixed to the Folio of 1616 include a copy by Francis Beaumont 'Vpon the Silent Woman', as well as his two poems in praise of Volpone and Catiline reprinted from the Quartos of those plays. Beaumont discusses personal satire in the drama¹—its effectiveness or otherwise in competent and incompetent hands—and Sir Edmund Chambers suggests that the lines were written for the Quarto of 1612. The suggestion must certainly be accepted, but it does not prove that Jonson did not keep the verses in his desk and use them for the first time in the Folio. The problem is insoluble unless a copy of the missing Quarto turns up.

The authoritative text is in any case that of the 1616 Folio. Jonson read the proofs, but not with his usual care. The misprints are mostly trivial, such as turned letters or wrong punctuation, but there are forty-seven of them.² The worst are 'a sauer i' the man' for 'saver in the main' (III. iii. 34); 'all women are not to be taken alwaies' for 'all ways' (IV. i. 90); and the misspellings 'numbre' for 'nombre' (IV. v. 329) and 'Paralisis' (v. iii. 178).

In three large-paper copies of the 1616 Folio—the Grenville copy in the British Museum, the Fleming Crooks copy, now in the possession of Mr. H. L. Ford, and Sir C. Firth's copy, now in the possession of the editor—sheet Y y (Act I and Act II up to scene ii, line 64) has been reset. The line-arrangements of several pages differ from those of the ordinary issue; there are eighteen variant readings, all of which are wrong; the spelling is freely altered, the punctuation varies, and sometimes roman type is substituted for italic in the printing of proper names. In all, there are nearly two hundred and eighty changes. They have some textual importance because the Folio of 1640 was set up from a copy containing this ill-printed sheet.

The explanation is probably this. Large-paper copies of a work at the present day are usually printed after the ordinary issue on small paper has been worked off: there is no clear proof that this was so in the seventeenth century, but probably it is the traditional practice. The dislocation in sheet Y y must have occurred when the edition was being printed off and after Jonson had passed the proofs. It was probably due to an accident in the printing-house—for instance, to a workman dropping the formes. It was reset without consulting Jonson. What he would have said if he had discovered a copy in this state can be but faintly imagined.

It would be useless to cumber the critical apparatus of Epicoene with this array of printer's variants. Thus there are thirty-eight interchanges of 'be' and 'bee', 'he' and 'hee', 'she' and 'shee', 'we' and 'wee', the printer taking the spelling which best suited his spacing of the line. A selection has been made giving (1) the deviations from the authorized text, (2) anything reproduced in the 1640 Folio which, but for this evidence, would be regarded as a change or a correction. But in the critical survey of the text which will precede the commentary a full record with a facsimile will be given because of the light it throws on the working methods of a seventeenth-century printer.

Stansby reprinted the play in quarto in 1620. The title-page is in two states. The first copies the Folio: 'Epicoene, or The silent Woman. A Comœdie. Acted in the yeare 1609. By the Children of her Majesties Revels. The Author B. I.' This was replaced by a cancel: 'The Silent Woman. A Comœdie. Acted by the Children of the Revels. The Author B. Ionson.' Had this been done earlier, we might have conjectured that Epicoene had disappeared because of its possible association with Lady Arabella, but no reason can be assigned for the change in 1620. 'Epicoene' is the only clue Jonson gave to the real sex of the character, but would any one but himself grasp its significance?

The collation, two leaves of A, B to O in fours, is in detail: A 1 recto, title-page; verso, blank; A 2 recto, the dedication; verso, the persons and the scene; B to O 4 recto, the text of the play; O 4 verso, blank. The running title is 'The silent Woman'. Five copies have been collated for the text of the present edition :

(1, 2) Two copies in the British Museum with press-marks 1346.a.9 and 644.b.51, the former T. Jolley's copy with the cancel title-page, the latter defective with sheet A missing.

(3) The Bodleian copy, formerly Malone's, with the original title-page : the press-mark is Malone 229 (3).

(4) The copy in the Harvard University Library, formerly W. A. White's, with the original title-page, from a photostat kindly supplied by the Librarian.

(5) The copy in the Dyce Library, with sheet A missing.

The Quarto is a grossly careless reprint of the 1616 Folio, with only two real departures from that text—'adiudg'd' for 'iudg'd' in III. ii. 57, and 'perpetuall about motion' for 'perpetuall motion' in V. iii. 63. These are not misprints like 'continue you it' in V. ii. 62 or 'once againe' for 'once' in V. iii. 8, but they obviously have no authority. A stupid misprint of the Folio, 'you you'll' in II. iii. 139, is reproduced, and a speech which is obviously Truewit's is assigned to Clerimont (IV. iv. 186-9). Dropped or misplaced letters, which would strike the eye at once if Stansby or his corrector had glanced at the proofs—'pay' for 'pray', 'grat' for 'great', 'tls' for 'tis', 'id' for 'in'—disfigure the book. No variant readings have been detected in the copies examined.

The Folio of 1640 is a reprint by Richard Bishop of the 1616 Folio. Owing to the unfortunate accident that the copy which Bishop acquired from Stansby contained sheet Y y after it had been reset, the 1640 text reproduced its errors and alterations at the beginning of the play. The most important are the omission of the marginal note to the second prologue, explaining that it was 'Occasion'd by some persons impertinent exception', and therefore, it may be assumed, never spoken on the stage ; the substitution of 'going' for 'marching' in I. i. 178 ; the omission of 'one CVT-BERD' in I. ii. 33 ; the assigning of La-Foole's speech 'No, sir . . . Your seruant' in I. iv. 72-5 to Clerimont; and the odd change of 'puritane preachings' to 'Puritane Parlees' in II. ii. 34-5. It also introduced new blunders. In the list of the 'Persons of the Play' it duplicated the name of Mavis: she is 'MAD. MAVIS' in the list of the Collegiates, and also 'M^{rs}. MAVIS, The La. HAUGHTIES woman.' instead of 'M^{rs}. TRVSTY'. The chief textual errors are—'speake' for 'spend' (I. i. 36); 'particle' for 'article' (ib. 30); 'master' for 'mistris' (iv. 81); 'pitch' for 'pith' (III. ii. 44); 'ARTEMIDORTS' for 'ARTEMIDORVS' (ib. 62); 'difference' for 'diffidence' (IV. i. 68); 'search' for 'scratch' (v. 24); 'barke' for 'brake' (vi. 28); and 'divertendendo' for 'diuertendo' (v. iii. 72). The few corrections it makes are obvious, such as 'They' for 'Thy' (I. i. 102); 'DAW.' for 'DAV.' (II. iii. 125); and 'nombre' for 'numbre' (IV. v. 329). It changes the punctuation rather freely, especially in the substitution of the more logical semicolon for the comma; and it modernizes the spelling.

The text of the 1616 Folio has been twice reprinted. Dr. Aurelia Henry edited it for the Yale Studies in English, no. xxxi, in 1906: she took her text from the copy in the Library of Yale University and collated it with the two copies in the British Museum. Professor C. M. Gayley edited the play in his Representative English Comedies, 1913, vol. ii, pp. 113-43; he used one of the Bodleian copies. He modernizes the capitals and italics, and prints 'j' and 'v' according to current usage. The extremely accurate reprint of the Folio edited by Professor W. Bang at Louvain in the seventh volume of his Materialien zur Kunde des älteren englischen Dramas unfortunately stops short at the end of sheet Z z, which ends at Act III, scene i, line 20 of Epicoene.

TO THE TRVLV
NOBLE, BY ALL TITLES.

Sir Francis Stuart:

SIR,

MY hope is not so nourish'd by example, as it will conclude, this dumbe peece should please you, by cause it hath pleas'd others before : but by trust, that when you haue read it, you will find it worthy to haue dis-pleas'd none. This makes, that I now num- 5 ber you, not onely in the Names of fauour, but the Names of iustice, to what I write ; and doe, presently, call you to the exercise of that noblest, and manlyest vertue : as coueting rather to be freed in my fame, by the authority of a Iudge, then the credit of an Vnder- 10 taker. Read therefore, I pray you, and censure.
There is not a line, or syllable in it changed from the simplicity of the first Copy. And, when you shall consider, through the certaine hatred of some, how much a mans innocency may bee indanger'd by an 15 vn-certaine accusation ; you will, I doubt not, so beginne to hate the iniquitie of such natures, as I shall loue the contumely done me, whose end was so honorable, as to be wip'd off by your sentence.

Your vnprofitable, but true louer, 20

PROLOGVE.

TRuth sayes, of old, the art of making plaies
 Was to content the people ; & their praise
 Was to the Poet money, wine, and bayes.
 But in this age, a sect of writers are,
 That, onely, for particular likings care, 5
 And will taste nothing that is populare.
 With such we mingle neither braines, nor brests ;
 Our wishes, like to those (make publique feasts)
 Are not to please the cookes tastes, but the guests.
 Yet, if those cunning palates hether come, 10
 They shall find guests entreaty, and good roome ;
 And though all relish not, sure, there will be some,
 That, when they leaue their seates, shall make 'hem say,
 Who wrote that piece, could so haue wrote a play :
 But that, he knew, this was the better way. 15
 For, to present all custard, or all tart,
 And haue no other meats, to beare a part,
 Or to want bread, and salt, were but course art.
 The Poet prayes you then, with better thought
 To sit ; and, when his cates are all in brought, 20
 Though there be none far fet, there will deare-bought
 Be fit for ladies : some for lords, knights, squires,
 Some for your waiting wench, and citie-wires,
 Some for your men, and daughters of white-Friars.
 Nor is it, onely, while you keepe your seate 25

THe ends of all, who for the Scene doe write,
 Are, or should be, to profit, and delight.
 And still 't hath beene the praise of all best times,
 So persons were not touch'd, to taxe the crimes.
 5 Then, in this play, which we present to night,
 And make the object of your eare, and sight,
 On forfeit of your selues, thinke nothing true :
 Lest so you make the maker to iudge you.
 For he knowes, Poet neuer credit gain'd
 10 By writing truths, but things (like truths) well fain'd.
 If any, yet, will (with particular slight
 Of application) wrest what he doth write ;
 And that he meant or him, or her, will say :
 They make a libell, which he made a play.

C L E. I thinke, and aboue a man too, if the truth were rack'd out of you.

B O Y. No faith, I'll confesse before, sir. The gentlewomen play with me, and throw me o' the bed ; and carry me in to my lady ; and shee kisses me with her oil'd face ; and puts a perruke o' my head ; and askes me an' I will weare her gowne ; and I say, no : and then she hits me a blow o' the eare, and calls me innocent, and lets me goe.

C L E. No maruell, if the dore bee kept shut against your master, when the entrance is so easie to you—well sir, you shall goe there no more, lest I bee faine to seeke your voyce in my ladies rushes, a fortnight hence. Sing, sir.

Boy sings.

T R V. Why, here's the man that can melt away his time, and neuer feeles it ! what, betweene his mistris abroad, and his engle at home, high fare, soft lodging, fine clothes, and his fiddle ; hee thinkes the houres ha' no wings, or the day no post-horse. Well, sir gallant, were you strooke with the plague this minute, or condemn'd to any capitall punishment to morrow, you would beginne then to thinke, and value euery article o' your time, esteeme it at the true rate, and giue all for't.

C L E. Why, what should a man doe ?

T R V. Why, nothing : or that, which when 'tis done, is as idle. Harken after the next horse-race, or hunting-match ; lay wagers, praise Puppy, or Pepper-corne, White-foote, Franklin ; sweare vpon White-maynes partie ; spend aloud, that my lords may heare you ; visite my ladies at night, and bee able to giue 'hem the character of euery bowler, or better o' the greene. These be the things, wherein 40 your fashionable men exercise themselues, and I for com-panie.

C L E. Nay, if I haue thy authoritie, I'll not leaue yet.
 Come, the other are considerations, when wee come to haue gray heads, and weake hammes, moist eyes, and shrunke 45 members. Wee'll thinke on 'hem then; then wee'll pray, and fast.

T R V. I, and destine onely that time of age to goodnesse, which our want of abilitie will not let vs employ in euill?

C L E. Why, then 'tis time enough.

50 T R V. Yes: as if a man should sleepe all the terme, and thinke to effect his businesse the last day. O, C L E R I-M O N T, this time, because it is an incorporeall thing, and not subiect to sense, we mocke our selues the finest out of it, with vanitie, and miserie indeede: not seeking an end 55 of wretchednesse, but onely changing the matter still.

C L E. Nay, thou'lt not leaue now——

T R V. See but our common disease! with what iustice can wee complaine, that great men will not looke vpon vs, nor be at leisure to giue our affaires such dispatch, as wee 60 expect, when wee will neuer doe it to our selues: nor heare, nor regard our selues.

C L E. Foh, thou hast read P L V T A R C H S moralls, now, or some such tedious fellow; and it shewes so vilely with thee:
 'Fore god, 'twill spoile thy wit vtterly. Talke me of pinnes, 65 and feathers, and ladies, and rushes, and such things: and leaue this Stoicitie alone, till thou mak'st sermons.

T R V. Well, sir. If it will not take, I haue learn'd to loose as little of my kindnesse, as I can. I'll doe good to no man against his will, certainly. When were you at the colledge?

70 C L E. What colledge?

T R V. As if you knew not!

C L E. No faith, I came but from court, yesterday.

T R V. Why, is it not arriu'd there yet, the newes? A new foundation, sir, here i' the towne, of ladies, that call themselves the Collegiates, an order betweene courtiers, 75 and country-madames, that live from their husbands ; and giue entertainment to all the Wits, and Braueries o' the time, as they call 'hem : crie downe, or vp, what they like, or dislike in a braine, or a fashion, with most masculine, or rather hermaphroditicall authoritie : and, euery day, gaine 80 to their colledge some new probationer.

C L E. Who is the President ?

T R V. The graue, and youthfull matron, the lady
H A V G H T Y.

C L E. A poxe of her autumnall face, her peec'd beautie : 85 there's no man can bee admitted till shee be ready, now adaies, till shee has painted, and perfum'd, and wash'd, and scour'd, but the boy here ; and him shee wipes her oil'd lips vpon, like a sponge. I haue made a song, I pray thee heare it, o' the subiect. 90

S O N G.

*Still to be neat, still to be drest,
As, you were going to a feast ;
Still to be pou'dred, still perfum'd :
Lady, it is to be presum'd,
Though arts hid causes are not found, 95
All is not sweet, all is not sound.
Giue me a looke, giue me a face,
That makes simplicitie a grace ;
Robes loosely flowing, haire as free :
Such sweet neglect more taketh me, 100
Then all th'adulteries of art.
They strike mine eyes, but not my heart.*

T R V. And I am, clearely, o' the other side : I loue a good dressing, before any beautie o' the world. O, a woman is, then, like a delicate garden ; nor, is there one 105 kind of it : she may varie, euery houre ; take often counsell of her glasse, and choose the best. If shee haue good eares, shew 'hem ; good haire, lay it out ; good legs, weare short cloathes ; a good hand, discouer it often ; practise any art, 110 to mend breath, clense teeth, repaire eye-browes, paint, and professe it.

C L E. How ? publicly ?

T R V. The doing of it, not the manner : that must bee priuate. Many things, that seeme foule, i' the doing, doe 115 please, done. A lady should, indeed, studie her face, when wee thinke shee sleepes : nor, when the dores are shut, should men bee inquiring, all is sacred within, then. Is it for vs to see their perrukes put on, their false teeth, their complexion, their eye-browes, their nailes ? you see guilders 120 will not worke, but inclos'd. They must not discouer, how little serues, with the helpe of art, to adorne a great deale.
 How long did the canuas hang afore Ald-gate ? were the people suffer'd to see the cities Loue, and Charitie, while they were rude stone, before they were painted, and 125 burnish'd ? No. No more should seruants approch their mistresses, but when they are compleat, and finish'd.

C L E. Well said, my T R V E - W I T.

T R V. And a wise ladie will keepe a guard alwaies vpon the place, that shee may doe things securely. I once 130 followed a rude fellow into a chamber, where the poore madame, for haste, and troubled, snatch'd at her perruke, to couer her baldnesse : and put it on, the wrong way.

C L E. O prodigie !

T R V. And the vn-conscionable knaue held her in com-135 plement an houre, with that reuerst face, when I still look'd when shee should talke from the t'other side.

C L E. Why, thou should'st ha' releeu'd her.

T R V. No faith, I let her alone, as wee'll let this argument, if you please, and passe to another. When saw you

T R V. Sicke o' the vncke? is hee? I met that stiffe peece of formalitie, his vncke, yesterday, with a huge turbant of night-caps on his head, buckled ouer his eares. 145

C L E. O, that's his custome when he walkes abroad. Hee can endure no noise, man.

T R V. So I haue heard. But is the disease so ridiculous in him, as it is made? they say, hee has beene vpon diuers treaties with the Fish-wiues, and Orenge-women; and 150 articles propounded betweene them: mary, the Chimney-sweepers will not be drawne in.

C L E. No, nor the Broome-men: they stand out stiffely. He cannot endure a Costard-monger, he swounes if he heare one.

T R V. Me thinkes, a Smith should be ominous. 155

C L E. Or any Hammer-man. A Brasier is not suffer'd to dwel in the parish, nor an Armorer. He would haue hang'd a Pewterers 'prentice once vpon a shroue-tuesdaies riot, for being o' that trade, when the rest were quit.

T R V. A Trumpet should fright him terribly, or the 160 Hau'-boyes?

C L E. Out of his senses. The Waights of the citie haue a pension of him, not to come neere that ward. This youth practis'd on him, one night, like the Bell-man; and neuer left till hee had brought him downe to the doore, with a 165 long-sword: and there left him flourishing with the aire.

B o y. Why, sir! hee hath chosen a street to lie in, so narrow at both ends, that it will receiue no coaches, nor carts, nor any of these common noises: and therefore, we that loue him, deuise to bring him in such as we may, now 170 and then, for his exercise, to breath him. Hee would grow resty else in his ease. His vertue would rust without action. I entreated a Beare-ward, one day, to come downe with the dogs of some foure parishes that way, and I thanke him, hee did; & cryed his games vnder master M O R O S E 's win- 175 dore: till he was sent crying away, with his head made a most bleeding spectacle to the multitude. And, another time, a Fencer, marching to his prize, had his drum most tragically run through, for taking that street in his way, at my request.

180 T R V. A good wag. How do's he for the bells ?

C L E. O, i' the Queenes time, he was wont to goe out of towne euey satterday at ten a clock, or on holy-day-eues. But now, by reason of the sicknesse, the perpetuitie of ringing has made him deuise a roome, with double walls, 185 and treble seelings ; the windores close shut, and calk'd : and there he liues by candle-light. He turn'd away a man, last weeke, for hauing a paire of new shooes that creak'd. And this fellow waits on him, now, in tennis-court socks, or slippers sol'd with wooll : and they talke each to other, 190 in a trunke. See, who comes here.

DAUPHINE, TRVE-WIT, CLERIMONT.

HOW now ! what aile you sirs ? dumbe ?
T R V. Strooke into stone, almost, I am here, with tales o' thine vncle ! There was neuer such a prodigie heard of.

D A V P. I would you would once loose this subiect, my 5 masters, for my sake. They are such as you are, that haue brought mee into that predicament, I am, with him.

T R V. How is that ?

D A V P. Mary, that he will dis-inherit me, no more. Hee thinks, I, and my companie are authors of all the ridiculous 10 acts, and moniments are told of him.

T R V. S'lid, I would be the author of more, to vex him, that purpose deserues it : it giues thee law of plaguing him. I'll tell thee what I would doe. I would make a false almanack ; get it printed : and then ha' him drawne out on 15 a coronation day to the lower-wharfe, and kill him with the Art not thou next of bloud, and his sisters sonne ?

D A V P. I, but he will thrust me out of it, he vowes, and marry.

T R V. How ! that's a more portent. Can he endure no ²⁰ noise, and will venter on a wife ?

C L E. Yes : why, thou art a stranger, it seemes, to his best trick, yet. He has imploid a fellow this halfe yeere, all ouer England, to harken him out a dumbe woman ; bee shee of any forme, or any qualitie, so shee bee able to beare ²⁵ children : her silence is dowrie enough, he saies.

T R V. But, I trust to god, he has found none.

C L E. No, but hee has heard of one that's lodg'd i' the next street to him, who is exceedingly soft-spoken ; thrifty of her speech ; that spends but sixe words a day. And her ³⁰ hee's about now, and shall haue her.

T R V. Is't possible ! who is his agent i' the businesse ?

C L E. Mary, a Barber, one C V T - B E R D : an honest fellow, one that tells D A V P H I N E all here.

T R V. Why, you oppresse mee with wonder ! A woman, ³⁵ and a barber, and loue no noise !

C L E. Yes faith. The fellow trims him silently, and has not the knacke with his sheeres, or his fingers : and that continence in a barber hee thinkes so eminent a vertue, as it has made him chiefe of his counsell. 40

T R V. Is the barber to be seene ? or the wench ?

C L E. Yes, that they are.

T R V. I pray thee, D A V P H I N E, let's goe thether.

D A V P. I haue some businesse now : I cannot i' faith.

T R V. You shall haue no businesse shall make you neglect ⁴⁵ this, sir, wee'll make her talke, belecue it ; or if shee will not, wee can giue out, at least so much as shall interrupt the treatie : wee will breake it. Thou art bound in conscience, when hee suspects thee without cause, to torment him.

T R V. Yes, of keeping distance.

C L E. They say he is a very good scholler.

that pretends onely to learning, buyes titles, and nothing else of bookes in him.

C L E. The world reports him to be very learned.

T R V. I am sorry, the world should so conspire to belie him.

80 C L E. Good faith, I haue heard very good things come from him.

T R V. You may. There's none so desperately ignorant to denie that: would they were his owne. God b'w'you gentle-a very honest fellow.

DAVP. I thinke no other : but this franke nature of his know where he has beene well trusted, and discharg'd the trust very truely, and heartily.

DAVP. I contend not, NED, but, with the fewer a businesse is carried, it is euer the safer. Now we are alone, if 10 you'll goe thether, I am for you.

CLE. When were you there ?

DAVP. Last night : and such a decameron of sport fallen out ! BOCCACE neuer thought of the like. DAW do's nothing but court her ; and the wrong way. Hee would lie 15 with her, and praises her modestie ; desires that shee would talke, and bee free, and commends her silence in verses :
which hee reades, and sweares, are the best that euer man made. Then railes at his fortunes, stamps, and mutines, why he is not made a counsellor, and call'd to affaires of state. 20 torments! you shall lye with her but when she lists; she will not hurt her beauty, her complexion; or it must be for that iewell, or that pearle, when she do's; euery halfe 95 houres pleasure must be bought anew: and with the same paine, and charge, you woo'd her at first. Then, you must lers, tyre-women, sempsters, fether-men, perfumers ; while 110 shee feeles not how the land drops away ; nor the acres melt ; nor forsees the change, when the mercer has your woods for her veluets ; neuer weighes what her pride costs, sir : so shee may kisse a page, or a smoth chinne, that has the despaire of a beard ; bee a states-woman, know all the 115 newes, what was done at Salisbury, what at the Bath, what at court, what in progresse ; or, so shee may censure poets,

 SPENSER, IONSON with the tother youth, and so forth ; or, be thought cunning in controuersies, or the very

 of the question : and then skip to the Mathematiques, and demonstration and answere, in religion to one ; in state, to another, in baud'ry to a third.

M O R. O, ô !

125 T R V. All this is very true, sir. And then her going in disguise to that coniurer, and this cunning woman : where the first question is, how soone you shall die ? next, if her present seruant loue her ? next that, if she shall haue a new seruant ? and how many ? which of her family would make 130 the best baud, male, or female ? what precedence shee shall haue by her next match ? and sets downe the answers, and beleeuues 'hem aboue the scriptures. Nay, perhaps she'll

CLE. What doe you think of the Poets, sir IOHN?

DAW. Not worthy to be nam'd for authors. HOMER, an old tedious prolixasse, talkes of curriers, and chines of beefe. VIRGIL, of dunging of land, and bees. HORACE, of I know not what. 65 much as your barber: hee is his wifes Subiect, he calls her heate, partly for reuerence. At this instant, hee is marshalling of his bull, beare, and horse.

DAVP. What be those, in the name of Sphinx?

60 TRV. Why sir? hee has beene a great man at the beare-garden in his time: and from that subtile sport, has tane the witty denomination of his chiefe carousing cups. One he calls his bull, another his beare, another his horse. And then hee has his lesser glasses, that hee calls his deere, and

BY your leaue, faire mistress OTTER, I'll be bold to

M^r. OT. It shall not be obnoxious, or difficill, sir.

M^r. OT. I cannot assure you, M^r. TRVE-WIT. Here was a very melancholy knight in a ruffe, that demanded my subiect for some body, a gentleman, I thinke.

C L E. Your dreame, lady ? 65

It staynd me a damasque table-cloth, cost me eighteen pound at one time ; and burnt me a blacke satten gowne, as I stood by the fire, at my ladie C E N T A V R E S chamber in the colledge, another time. A third time, at the Lords 70 masque, it dropt all my wire, and my ruffe with waxe-candle, that I could not goe vp to the banquet. A fourth time, as I was taking coach to goe to Ware, to meet a friend, it dash'd me a new sute all ouer (a crimson sattin doublet, and blacke veluet skirts) with a brewers horse, that I was 75 faine to goe in and shift mee, and kept my chamber a leash of daies for the anguish of it.

D A V P. These were dire mischances, lady.

M O R. How !

E P I. It do's not become your grauity, or breeding, (as 30 you pretend in court) to haue offered this outrage on a waterman, or any more boystrous creature, much lesse on a man of his ciuill coat.

M O R. You can speake then !

E P I. Yes, sir.

M O R. Speake out I meane.

E P I. I sir. Why, did you thinke you had married a statue ? or a motion, onely ? one of the French puppets, with the eyes turn'd with a wire ? or some innocent out of the hospitall, that would stand with her hands thus, and 40 a playse mouth, and looke vpon you.

I had, when I writ simply maide : but I hope, I shall make it a stocke still competent, to the estate, and dignity of your wife.

M O R. Shee can talke !

TRVE-WIT, MOROSE, EPICOENE.

WHere's master MOROSE?

MOR. Is he come againe! lord haue mercy vpon me.

TRV. I wish you all ioy, mistris EPICOENE, with 5 your graue and honourable match.EPI. I returne you the thanks, master TRVE-WIT, so friendly a wish deserues.

MOR. She has acquaintance, too!

TRV. God saue you, sir, and giue you all contentment 10 in your faire choise, here. Before I was the bird of night to you, the owle, but now I am the messenger of peace, a doue, and bring you the glad wishes of many friends, to the celebration of this good houre.

MOR. What houre, sir?

15 TRV. Your marriage houre sir. I commend your resolution, that (notwithstanding all the dangers I laid afore you, in the voice of a night-crow) would yet goe on, and bee your selfe. It shewes you are a man constant to your own ends, and vpright to your purposes, that would not be put 20 off with left-handed cries.MOR. How should you arriue at the knowledge of so much!TRV. Why, did you euer hope, sir, committing the secrecie of it to a barber, that lesse then the whole towne 25 should know it? you might as wel ha' told it the conduit, or the bake-house, or the infant'ry that follow the court, and with more securitie. Could your grautie forget so olde

M O R. Barre my dores ! barre my dores ! where are all my eaters ? my mouthes now ? barre vp my dores, you varlets.

35

E P I. He is a varlet, that stirres to such an office. Let 'hem stand open. I would see him that dares mooue his eyes toward it. Shal I haue a barricado made against my friends, to be barr'd of any pleasure they can bring in to me with honorable visitation ?

40

M O R. O Amazonian impudence !

T R V. Nay faith, in this, sir, she speakes but reason : and me thinkes is more continent then you. Would you goe to bed so presently, sir, afore noone ? a man of your head, and haire, should owe more to that reuerend ceremony, 45 and not mount the marriage-bed, like a towne-bul, or a mountaine-goate ; but stay the due season ; and ascend it then with religion, and feare. Those delights are to be steep'd in the humor, and silence of the night ; and giue the day to other open pleasures, and jollities of feast, of 50 musique, of reuells, of discourse : wee'll haue all, sir, that may make your Hymen high, and happy.

M O R. O, my torment, my torment !

T R V. Nay, if you indure the first halfe houre, sir, so tediously, and with this irksomnesse ; what comfort, or 55 hope, can this faire gentlewoman make to her selfe hereafter, in the consideration of so many yeeres as are to come——

M O R. Of my affliction. Good sir, depart, and let her doe it alone.

TRV. Sir IOHNDAW, sir, your wifes seruant, this.

15 MOR. ADAW, and her seruant! O, 'tis decreed, 'tis decreed of mee, and shee haue such seruants.

TRV. Nay sir, you must kisse the ladies, you must not goe away, now; they come toward you, to seeke you out.

C L E. He may presume it, I thinke.

T R V. The spitting, the coughing, the laughter, the nees-ing, the farting, dauncing, noise of the musique, and her masculine, and lowd commanding, and vrging the whole 10 family, makes him thinke he has married a furie.

C L E. And shee carries it vp brauely.

T R V. I, shee takes any occasion to speake : that's the height on't.

C L E. And how soberly D A V P H I N E labours to satisfie 15 him, that it was none of his plot !

T R V. And has almost brought him to the faith, i' the article. Here he comes. Where is he now ? what's become of him, D A V P H I N E ?

D A V. O, hold me vp a little, I shall goe away i' the iest 20 else. Hee has got on his whole nest of night-caps, and lock'd himselfe vp, i' the top o' the house, as high, as euer he can climbe from the noise. I peep'd in at a crany, and saw him sitting ouer a crosse-beame o' the rooffe, like him o' the sadlers horse in Fleetstreet, vp-right : and he will sleepe 25 there.

C L E. But where are your collegiates ?

D A V. With-drawne with the bride in priuate.

T R V. O, they are instructing her i' the colledge-Grammar. If shee haue grace with them, shee knowes all their 30 secrets instantly.

C L E. Me thinks, the lady H A V G H T Y lookes well to day, for all my dispraise of her i' the morning. I thinke,
I shall come about to thee againe, T R V E - W I T.

T R V. Beleeue it, I told you right. Women ought to re- 35 paire the losses, time and yeeres haue made i' their features, with dressings. And an intelligent woman, if shee know by her selfe the least defect, will bee most curious, to hide it : and it becomes her. If shee be short, let her sit much, lest when shee stands, shee be thought to sit. If shee haue an 40 ill foot, let her weare her gowne the longer, and her shoo the thinner. If a fat hand, and scald nailes, let her carue the lesse, and act in gloues. If a sowre breath, let her neuer discourse fasting: and alwaies talke at her distance. If 45 shee haue black and rugged teeth, let her offer the lesse at laughter, especially if shee laugh wide, and open.

C L E. O, you shall haue some women, when they laugh, you would thinke they bray'd, it is so rude, and——

T R V. I, and others, that will stalke i' their gait like an 50 Estrich, and take huge strides. I cannot endure such a sight.
I loue measure i' the feet, and number i' the voice: they are gentlenesses, that oft-times draw no lesse then the face.

D A V. How cam'st thou to studie these creatures so exactly? I would thou would'st make me a proficient.

55 T R V. Yes, but you must leaue to liue i' your chamber then a month together vpon AMADIS de Gaule, or Don QVIXOTE, as you are wont; and come abroad where the matter is frequent, to court, to tiltings, publique showes, and feasts, to playes, and church sometimes: thither they 60 come to shew their new tyres too, to see, and to be seene.
In these places a man shall find whom to loue, whom to play with, whom to touch once, whom to hold euer. The varietie arrests his iudgement. A wench to please a man comes not downe dropping from the seeling, as he lyes on 65 his backe droning a tobacco pipe. He must goe where shee is.

D A V. Yes, and be neuer the neere.

T R V. Out heretique. That diffidence makes thee worthy it should bee so.

70 C L E. He sayes true to you, D A V P H I N E.

D A V. Why?

T R V. A man should not doubt to ouer-come any woman.
Thinke he can vanquish 'hem, and he shall: for though they denie, their desire is to be tempted. P E N E L O P E 75 her selfe cannot hold out long. Ostend, you saw, was taken at last. You must perseuer, and hold to your purpose.

soeuer, they wish in their hearts we should sollicite them. Praise 'hem, flatter 'hem, you shal neuer want eloquence, or trust : euen the chastest delight to feele themselues that 80 way rub'd. With praises you must mixe kisses too. If they take them, they'll take more. Though they striue, they would bee ouer-come.

C L E. O, but a man must beware of force.

T R V. It is to them an acceptable violence, and has oft- 85 times the place of the greatest courtesie. Shee that might haue beene forc'd, and you let her goe free without touching, though shee then seeme to thanke you, will euer hate you after : and glad i' the face, is assuredly sad at the heart.

C L E. But all women are not to be taken al waies. 90

T R V. 'Tis true. No more then all birds, or all fishes. If you appeare learned to an ignorant wench, or iocund to a sad, or witty to a foolish, why shee presently begins to mistrust her selfe. You must approach them i' their owne height, their owne line : for the contrary makes many that 95 feare to commit themselues to noble and worthy fellows, run into the imbraces of a rascall. If shee loue wit, giue verses, though you borrow 'hem of a friend, or buy 'hem, to haue good. If valour, talke of your sword, and be frequent in the mention of quarrels, though you be staunch in fight- 100 ing. If actiuitie, be seene o' your barbary often, or leaping ouer stooles, for the credit of your back. If shee loue good clothes or dressing, haue your learned counsell about you euery morning, your french taylor, barber, linnener, &c. Let your poulder, your glasse, and your combe, be your 105 dearest acquaintance. Take more care for the ornament of your head, then the safetie : and wish the common-wealth rather troubled, then a haire about you. That will take her. Then if shee be couetous and crauing, doe you promise any thing, and performe sparingly : so shall you keepe her 110 in appetite still. Seeme as you would giue, but be like a barren field that yeelds little, or vn lucky dice, to foolish, and hoping gamesters. Let your gifts be slight, and daintie, rather then pretious. Let cunning be aboue cost. Giue 115 cherries at time of yeere, or apricots ; and say they were sent you out o' the countrey, though you bought 'hem in Cheap-side. Admire her tyres ; like her in all fashions ; compare her in euery habit to some deitie ; inuent excellent dreames to flatter her, and riddles ; or, if shee bee a great 120 one, performe alwaies the second parts to her : like what shee likes, praise whom she praises, and faile not to make the houshold and seruants yours, yea the whole family, and salute 'hem by their names : ('tis but light cost if you can purchase 'hem so) and make her physitian your pensioner, 125 and her chiefe woman. Nor will it bee out of your gaine to make loue to her too, so shee follow, not vs her, her ladies pleasure. All blabbing is taken away, when shee comes to be a part of the crime.

D A V. On what courtly lap hast thou late slept, to come 130 forth so sudden and absolute a courtling ?

T R V. Good faith, I should rather question you, that are so harkning after these mysteries. I begin to suspect your diligence, D A V P H I N E. Speake, art thou in loue in earnest ?

eye ; another for the skin, and let her please the touch ;
a third for the voice, and let her please the eare ; and where 145 the obiects mixe, let the senses so too. Thou wouldst thinke it strange, if I should make 'hem all in loue with thee afore

D A W. What matter, sir ? Betweene whom ?

T R V. Come, you disguise it—Sir A M O R O V S and you. If you loue me, I A C K, you shall make vse of your philo-45 sophy now, for this once, and deliuer me your sword. This is not the wedding the C E N T A V R E S were at, though there be a shee-one here. The bride has entreated me I will see no bloud shed at her bridall, you saw her whisper me ere-while.

50 D A W. As I hope to finish T A C I T V S, I intend no murder.

D A W. No, no, no such thing I assure you. He and I parted now, as good friends as could be.

T R V. Trust not you to that visor. I saw him since dinner with another face : I haue knowne many men in my time vex'd with losses, with deaths, and with abuses, 65 but so offended a wight as sir A M O R O V S, did I neuer see, or read of. For taking away his guests, sir, to day, that's the cause : and hee declares it behind your backe, with such threatnings and contempts—— He said to D A V P H I N E, you were the errandst asse——

D A W. I, he may say his pleasure.

T R V. And sweares, you are so protested a coward, that hee knowes you will neuer doe him any manly or single right, and therefore hee will take his course.

D A W. I'll giue him any satisfaction, sir——but fighting. 75

T R V. I, sir, but who knowes what satisfaction hee'll take ? bloud he thirsts for, and bloud he will haue : and where-about on you he will haue it, who knowes, but himselfe ?

D A W. I pray you, master T R V E - W I T, be you a me- 80 diator.

T R V. Well, sir, conceale your selfe then in this studie, He puts till I returne. Nay, you must bee content to bee lock'd in : him vp. for, for mine owne reputation I would not haue you seene to receiue a publique disgrace, while I haue the matter in 85 managing. Gods so, here hee comes : keepe your breath close, that hee doe not heare you sigh. In good faith, sir A M O R O V S, hee is not this way, I pray you bee mercifull, doe not murder him ; hee is a christian as good as you :

90 you are arm'd as if you sought a reuenge on all his race.
 Good DAVPHINE, get him away from this place. I to his friends, hee would heare reason. IACK DAW.

 IACK DAW! a-sleepe?

95 DAW. Is he gone, master TRVE-WIT?

TRV. I, did you heare him?

DAW. O god, yes.

TRV. What a quick eare feare has?

DAW. And is he so arm'd, as you say?

100 TRV. Arm'd? did you euer see a fellow, set out to take possession?

DAW. I, sir.

TRV. That may giue you some light, to conceiue of him: but 'tis nothing to the principall. Some false brother 105 i' the house has furnish'd him strangely. Or, if it were out o' the house, it was TOM OTTER.

DAW. Indeed, hee's a Captayne, and his wife is his kinswoman.

TRV. Hee has got some-bodies old two-hand-sword, to 110 mow you off at the knees. And that sword hath spawn'd such a dagger!—but then he is so hung with pikes, halberds, peitronells, calliuers, and muskets, that he looks like a Iustice of peace's hall: a man of two thousand a yeere, is not sess'd at so many weapons, as he has on. There was 115 neuer fencer challeng'd at so many seuerall foiles. You would think hee meant to murder all Saint PVLCHRES parish. If hee could but victuall himselfe for halfe a yeere, in his breeches, hee is sufficiently arm'd to ouer-runne a countrie.

120 DAW. Good lord, what meanes he, sir! I pray you, master TRVE-WIT, be you a mediator.

D A W. It doth so indeed, sir. 265

T R V. And that you would suffer, I told him: so, at first he demanded, by my troth, in my conceipt, too much.

D A W. What was it, sir?

T R V. Your vpper lip, and sixe o' your fore-teeth.

D A W. O, did you so? why, he shall haue 'hem. 275

T R V. But he shall not, sir, by your leaue. The conclusion is this, sir, because you shall be very good friends hereafter, and this neuer to bee remembred, or vp-braided; besides, that he may not boast, he has done any such thing to you in his owne person: hee is to come here in disguise, 280 giue you fīue kicks in priuate, sir, take your sword from you, and lock you vp in that studie, during pleasure. Which will be but a little while, wee'll get it releas'd presently.

D A W. Fiue kicks? he shall haue sixe, sir, to be friends.

T R V. Beleeue mee, you shall not ouer-shoot your selfe, 285 to send him that word by me.

D A W. Deliuer it, sir. He shall haue it with all my heart, to be friends.

T R V. Friends? Nay, and he should not be so, and heartily too, vpon these termes, he shall haue me to enemie 290 while I liue. Come, sir, beare it brauely.

D A W. O god, sir, 'tis nothing.

T R V. True. What's sixe kicks to a man, that reads

195 DAW. I haue had a hundred, sir.

TRV. Sir AMOROS. No speaking one to another, or rehearsing old matters.

Dauphine comes forth, and kicks him. DAW. One, two, three, foure, fiue. I protest, sir AMOROS, you shall haue sixe.

TRV. Nay, I told you <you> should not talke. Come, to your safe custody: you shall presently meet afore the ladies, and be the dearest friends one to another—Giue me the scarfe, now, thou shalt beat the other bare-fac'd.

305 Stand by—sir AMOROS.

LA-F. What's here? A sword.

TRV. I cannot helpe it, without I should take the quar-rell vpon my selfe: here he has sent you his sword—

LA-F. I'll receiue none on't.

310 TRV. And he wills you to fasten it against a wall, and breake your head in some few seuerall places against the hilts.

LA-F. I will not: tell him roundly. I cannot endure to shed my owne blood.

315 TRV. Will you not?

LA-F. No. I'll beat it against a faire flat wall, if that will satisfie him: If not, he shall beat it himselfe, for AMOROS.

TRV. Why, this is strange starting off, when a man 320 vnder-takes for you! I offered him another condition:
Will you stand to that?

LA-F. I, what is't?

TRV. That you will be beaten, in priuate.

LA-F. Yes. I am content, at the blunt.

fess'd such stories of themselues. I would not giue a flies leg, in ballance against all the womens reputations here, if they could bee but thought to speake truth : and for the bride, cause why, and the place where. I had almost brought

'hem to affirme that they had done it, to day.

 confesse it with standing still, or humming, or gaping one

M O R. Are these the two learned men?

T R V. Yes, sir, please you salute 'hem?

M O R. Salute 'hem? I had rather doe any thing, then 25 common formes, as god saue you, and you are well-come, are so long as it is no whit better with him, whose affaires are 30

 45 those that are. Be swift in affoording me my peace, if so I shall hope any. I loue not your disputations, or your court-tumults. And that it be not strange to you, I will tell you. My father, in my education, was wont to aduise mee, that I should alwayes collect, and contayne my mind, 50 not suffring it to flow loosely ; that I should looke to what things were necessary to the carriage of my life, and what not : embracing the one, and eschewing the other. In short, that I should endeare my selfe to rest, and auoid turmoile : which now is growne to be another nature to me.
 55 So that I come not to your publike pleadings, or your places of noise ; not that I neglect those things, that make for the dignitie of the common-wealth : but for the meere auoiding of clamors, & impertinencies of Orators, that know not how to be silent. And for the cause of noise, am I now but in few cases, and the principall is in the common case, the adulterous case. But there are duodecim impedimenta, twelue impediments (as we call 'hem) all which doe not dirimere contractum, but irritum reddere matrimonium, as wee say in the Canon-law, not take away the bond, but cause 80 a nullitie therein.

M O R. I vnderstood you, before : good sir, auoid your impertinencie of translation.

O T T. He cannot open this too much, sir, by your fauour.

M O R. Yet more !

T R V. O, you must giue the learned men leaue, sir. To your impediments, master Doctor.

C V T. The first is impedimentum erroris.

O T T. Of which there are seuerall species.

C V T. I, as error personæ.

O T T. If you contract your selfe to one person, thinking her another.

C V T. Then, error fortunæ.

O T T. If shee be a beggar, and you thought her rich.

C V T. Then, error qualitatis.

O T T. If shee proue stubborne, or head-strong, that you thought obedient.

M O R. How ? is that, sir, a lawfull impediment ? One at once, I pray you gentlemen.

O T T. I, ante copulam, but not post copulam, sir.

C V T. M^r. Parson saies right. Nec post nuptiarum benedictionem. It doth indeed but irrita reddere sponsalia, annull the contract : after marriage it is of no obstancy.

T R V. Alas, sir, what a hope are we fall'n from, by this time !

105

C V T. The next is conditio : if you thought her free borne, and shee proue a bond-woman, there is impediment of estate and condition.

O T T. I, but M^r. Doctor, those seruitudes are sublatæ, now, among vs christians.

C V T. By your fauour, master Parson——

O T T. You shall giue me leaue, master Doctor.

M o R. Nay, gentlemen, quarrell not in that question ; it concernes not my case : passe to the third.

115 C v T. Well then, the third is votum. If either partie haue made a vow of chastitie. But that practice, as master Parson said of the other, is taken away among vs, thanks be to discipline. The fourth is cognatio : if the persons be of kinne, within the degrees.

120 O t T. I : doe you know, what the degrees are, sir ?

M o R. No, nor I care not, sir : they offer me no comfort in the question, I am sure.

C v T. But, there is a branch of this impediment may, which is cognatio spiritualis. If you were her god-father, 125 sir, then the marriage is incestuous.

O t T. That comment is absurd, and superstitious, master Doctor. I cannot endure it. Are we not all brothers and sisters, and as much a kinne in that, as god-fathers, and god-daughters ?

130 M o R. O me ! to end the controuersie, I neuer was a god-father, I neuer was a god-father in my life, sir. Passe to the next.

C v T. The fift is crimen adulterij : the knowne case. The sixth, cultus disparitas, difference of religion : haue you euer 135 examin'd her what religion shee is of ?

M o R. No, I would rather shee were of none, then bee put to the trouble of it !

O t T. You may haue it done for you, sir.

M o R. By no meanes, good sir, on, to the rest : shall you 140 euer come to an end, thinke you ?

T r v. Yes, hee has done halfe, sir. (On, to the rest) be patient, and expect, sir.

C v T. The seuenth is, vis : if it were vpon compulsion, or force.

145 M o R. O no, it was too voluntarie, mine : too voluntarie.

C v T. The eight is, ordo : if euer shee haue taken holy orders.

O t T. That's superstitious, too.

M O R. No matter, master Parson : would shee would go into a nunnerie yet.

C v t. The ninth is, ligamen : if you were bound, sir, to 150 any other before.

M o r. I thrust my selfe too soone into these fetters.

C v t. The tenth is, publica honestas : which is inchoata quædam affinitas.

O t t. I, or affinitas orta ex sponsalibus : and is but leue 155 impedimentum.

M o r. I feele no aire of comfort blowing to me, in all this.

C v t. The eleuenth is, affinitas ex fornicatione.

O t t. Which is no lesse vera affinitas, then the other, master Doctor. 160

C v t. True, quæ oritur ex legitimo matrimonio.

O t t. You say right, venerable Doctor. And, nascitur ex eo, quod per coniugium duæ personæ efficiuntur una caro——

M o r. Hey-day, now they beginne.

O t t. Et vere filius qui sic generatur——

M o r. What's all this to me ?

C l e. Now it growes warme.

C v t. The twelfth, and last is, si forte coire nequibis. 170

O t t. I, that is impedimentum grauissimum. It doth vtterly annull, and annihilate, that. If you haue manifestam frigiditatem, you are well, sir.

T r v. Why, there is comfort come at length, sir. Confesse your self but a man vnable, and shee will sue to be 175 diuorc'd first.

O t t. I, or if there be morbis perpetuus, & insanabilis, as Paralysis, Elephantiasis, or so——

D a v. O, but frigidity is the fairer way, gentlemen.

O t t. You say troth, sir, and as it is in the canon, master 180 Doctor.

C v t. I conceiue you, sir.

 MOR. Good sir, let me escape.
 TRV. You will not doe me that wrong, sir?
 OTT. And therefore, if he bee manifeste frigidus, sir——
 CVT. I, if he be manifeste frigidus, I grant you—— OTT. Why, that was my conclusion. 225
 CVT. And mine too.
 TRV. Nay, heare the conclusion, sir.
 OTT. Then, frigiditatis causa——
 CVT. Yes, causa frigiditatis——
 MOR. O, mine eares! 230
 OTT. Shee may haue libellum diuortij, against you.
 CVT. I, diuortij libellum shee will sure haue.
 MOR. Good eccho's, forbear.
 OTT. If you confesse it.
 CVT. Which I would doe, sir—— 235
 MOR. I will doe any thing——
 OTT. And cleere my selfe in foro conscientiae——
 CVT. Because you want indeed——
 MOR. Yet more?

I Will not endure it any longer. Ladies, I beseech you helpe me. This is such a wrong, as neuer was offer'd to poore bride before. Vpon her marriage day, to haue her husband conspire against her, and a couple of mercinarie

5 companions, to be brought in for formes sake, to perswade a separation ! If you had bloud, or vertue in you, gentlemen, you would not suffer such eare-wigs about a husband, or scorpions, to creep between man and wife——

MOR. O, the varietie and changes of my torment !

10 HAV. Let 'hem be cudgell'd out of dores, by our groomes.

CEN. I'll lend you my foot-man.

MAV. Wee'll haue our men blánket 'hem i' the hall.

M^r. OT. As there was one, at our house, madame, for 15 peeping in at the dore.

DAW. Content, yfaith.

TRV. Stay, ladies, and gentlemen, you'll heare, before you proceed ?

MAV. I'lld ha' the bride-groome blanketted, too.

20 CEN. Beginne with him first.

HAV. Yes, by my troth.

MOR. O, mankind generation !

DAVP. Ladies, for my sake forbear.

HAV. Yes, for sir DAVPHINES sake.

25 CEN. He shall command vs.

LA-F. He is as fine a gentleman of his inches, madame, as any is about the towne, and weares as good colours when he list.

TRV. Be brief, sir, and confesse your infirmitie, shee'll 30 be a-fire to be quit of you, if shee but heare that nam'd once, you shall not entreat her to stay. Shee'll flie you, like one that had the marks vpon him.

MOR. Ladies, I must craue all your pardons——

TRV. Silence, ladies.

35 MOR. For a wrong I haue done to your whole sexe, in marrying this faire, and vertuous gentlewoman——

CLE. Heare him, good ladies.

MOR. Being guiltie of an infirmitie, which before I confer'd with these learned men, I thought I might haue 40 conceal'd——

T R V. But now being better inform'd in his conscience by them, hee is to declare it, & giue satisfaction, by asking your publique forgiuenesse.

M O R. I am no man, ladies.

A L L. How!

M O R. Vtterly vn-abled in nature, by reason of frigidity, to performe the duties, or any the least office of a husband.

M A V. Now, out vpon him, prodigious creature!

C E N. Bride-groome vncarnate.

H A V. And would you offer it, to a young gentlewoman? 50

M^{rs}. O T. A lady of her longings?

E P I. Tut, a deuice, a deuice, this, it smells rankly, ladies. A mere comment of his owne.

T R V. Why, if you suspect that, ladies, you may haue him search'd. 55

D A W. As the custome is, by a iurie of physitians.

L A - F. Yes faith, 'twill be braue.

M O R. O me, must I vnder-goe that!

M^{rs}. O T. No, let women search him, madame: we can doe it our selues. 60

M O R. Out on me, worse!

E P I. No, ladies, you shall not need, I'll take him with all his faults.

M O R. Worst of all!

C L E. Why, then 'tis no diuorce, Doctor, if shee consent 65 not?

C V T. No, if the man be frigidus, it is de parte uxoris, that wee grant libellum diuortij, in the law.

O T T. I, it is the same in theologie.

M O R. Worse, worse then worst!

T R V. Nay, sir, bee not vtterly dis-heartned, wee haue yet a small relique of hope left, as neere as our comfort is blowne out. C L E R I M O N T, produce your brace of Knights. What was that, master Parson, you told me in errore qualitatis, e'ne now? D A V P H I N E, whisper the 75 bride, that shee carry it as if shee were guiltie, and asham'd.

O T T. Mary sir, in errore qualitatis (which master Doctor did forbear to vrge) if shee bee found corrupta, that is, vitiated or broken vp, that was pro virgine desponsa, 80 espous'd for a maid——

M O R. What then, sir ?

O T T. It doth dirimere contractum, and irritum reddere too.

T R V. If this be true, we are happy againe, sir, once 85 more. Here are an honorable brace of Knights, that shall affirme so much.

D A W. Pardon vs, good master C L E R I M O N T.

L A - F. You shall excuse vs, master C L E R I M O N T.

C L E. Nay, you must make it good now, Knights, there 90 is no remedie, I'll eate no words for you, nor no men : you know you spoke it to me ?

D A W. Is this gentleman-like, sir ?

D A W. Will you, sir A M O R O V S ? will you wound reputation ?

L A - F. I am resolu'd.

100 T R V. So should you be too, I A C K D A W : what should keepe you off ? shee is but a woman, and in disgrace. Hee'll be glad on't.

D A W. Will he ? I thought he would ha' beene angrie.

C L E. You will dispatch, Knights, it must be done, 105 yfaith.

T R V. Why, an' it must it shall, sir, they say. They'll ne're goe backe. Doe not tempt his patience.

D A W. It is true indeed, sir.

L A - F. Carnaliter ? what else, sir ?

O T T. It is inough : a plaine nullitie.

E P I. I am vn-done, I am vn-done !

M O R. O, let me worship and adore you, gentlemen ! 120

E P I. I am vn-done !

M O R. Yes, to my hand, I thanke these Knights : master Parson, let me thanke you otherwise.

C E N. So doe I, I protest.

C V T. But gentlemen, you haue not knowne her, since matrimonium ? 135

D A W. Not to day, master Doctor.

L A - F. No, sir, not to day.

C V T. Why, then I say, for any act before, the matri- monium is good and perfect : vnlesse, the worshipfull Bridegroome did precisely, before witsnesse demand, if shee were 140 virgo ante nuptias.

E P I. No, that he did not, I assure you, master Doctor.

C V T. If he cannot proue that, it is ratum coniugium, notwithstanding the premises. And they doe no way impedire.
And this is my sentence, this I pronounce. 145

O T T. I am of master Doctors resolution too, sir : if you made not that demand, ante nuptias.

M O R. O my heart ! wilt thou breake ? wilt thou breake ?
this is worst of all worst worsts ! that hell could haue 150 deuis'd ! Marry a whore ! and so much noise !

D A V P. Come, I see now plaine confederacie in this Doctor, and this Parson, to abuse a gentleman. You studie his affliction. I pray' bee gone companions. And gentlemen, I begin to suspect you for hauing parts with 'hem.
155 Sir, will it please you heare me ?

M O R. O, doe not talke to me, take not from mee the pleasure of dying in silence, nephew.

D A V P. Sir, I must speake to you. I haue beene long your poore despis'd kins-man, and many a hard thought 160 has strength'ned you against me : but now it shall appeare if either I loue you or your peace, and preferre them to all the world beside. I will not bee long or grieuous to you, sir. If I free you of this vnhappy match absolutely, and instantly after all this trouble, and almost in your despaire, 165 now——

M O R. (It cannot be.)

D A V P. Sir, that you bee neuer troubled with a murmure of it more, what shall I hope for, or deserue of you ?

M O R. O, what thou wilt, nephew ! thou shalt deserue 170 mee, and haue mee.

D A V P. Shall I haue your fauour perfect to me, and loue hereafter ?

M O R. That, and any thing beside. Make thine owne conditions. My whole estate is thine. Manage it, I will 175 become thy Ward.

D A V P. Nay, sir, I will not be so vn-reasonable.

E P I. Will sir D A V P H I N E be mine enimie too ?

D A V P. You know, I haue beene long a suter to you, vncke, that out of your estate, which is fifteen hundred a

M O R. Thou shalt haue it, nephew. I will doe it, and more. 185

D A V P. If I quit you not presently, and for-euer of this cumber, you shall haue power instantly, afore all these, to reuoke your act, and I will become, whose slaue you will giue me to, for-euer.

M O R. Where is the writing? I will seale to it, that, or 190 to a blanke, and write thine owne conditions.

E P I. O me, most vnfortunate wretched gentlewoman!

H A V. Will sir D A V P H I N E doe this?

E P I. Good sir, haue some compassion on me.

M O R. O, my nephew knowes you belike: away crocodile. 195

C E N. He do's it not sure, without good ground.

D A V P. Here, sir.

M O R. Come, nephew: giue me the pen. I will subscribe to any thing, and seale to what thou wilt, for my deliuerance. Thou art my restorer. Here, I deliuer it thee 200 as my deed. If there bee a word in it lacking, or writ with false orthographie, I protest before——I will not take the aduantage.

THE ALCHEMIST

THE TEXT

The Alchemist was entered on the Stationers' Register by Walter Burre on 3 October 1610. He published it in quarto in 1612. The entry is as follows :

3^o Octobris

Walter Burre. Entred for his copy vnder thandes of Sir George Bucke and Th'wardens a Comœdy called, The Alchymist made by Ben: Johnson vj^d

Arber, Transcript, III. 445.

The printer was Thomas Snodham, who did his work badly. John Stepneth was a partner with Burre in the publication ; both of them published at the sign of The Crane in Paul's Churchyard. In 1612 Stepneth also entered Jonson's Epi-grams on the Register.¹

The collation of the Quarto, A to M, is in detail : A 1 recto, title-page, with the verso blank ; A 2, dedication to Lady Mary Wroth ; A 3 recto, ' To the Reader ', continued on the verso, which also has verses by George Lucy ; A 4 recto, ' The Persons of the Comœdie ', and ' The Argument ' ; A 4 verso, ' The Prologue ' ; B to M, the text of the play. The running title is ' The ALCHEMIST '. The number of lines on the page varies from thirty-six to thirty-seven, the later pages being fuller to enable the printer to end on sheet M. Owing to the extra line D 3, I 3, and K 3 are not signed. The catchword on C 3 recto (I. iii. 76-7) is ' Cinoper ; ', the text on the verso is ' Cinoper '. On K 2 (IV. v. 25-32), where the conclusion of Döl's ravings and the dialogue of Mammon and Face are printed in parallel columns, to show that they are all speaking together, the text is in small type spread across the page ; of all the copies examined only Mr. Wise's copy is uncropped at this point.

Six copies have been collated for the text of the present edition :

(1) The British Museum copy (marked A in the following list) ;

¹ On 15 May (Arber, iii. 485).

(2) The Malone copy in Bodley, in which three leaves, A 2 to A 4, are missing (B) ;

(3) The two Dyce copies at South Kensington, of which one is perfect (C 1), and the other (C 2) lacks E 2 and E 3 and has M 3 supplied in manuscript ;

(4) The copy in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, given to the College with seven other plays by Bryan Twyne in 1644 (D) ;

(5) Mr. T. J. Wise's copy (E).

The following corrections have been found in the six copies :

Lines in which a stop, faint in some copies and missing in others, has dropped out in the printing are not recorded as variants.

In the minor points of spelling and punctuation the Quarto is lax. So also is the Folio. Jonson's metrical apostrophe, as usual, gave the printers trouble. We have restored it on the authority of the Quarto in 'who'are' (II. ii. 67), 'They'are' (III. ii. 122), 'to'you' (IV. iii. 89). The Quarto sometimes inserts the stop wrongly and the Folio reproduces it;¹ the Folio prints such an absurdity

as 'nd' in I. iii. 85. But there are clear signs in the Folio text of Jonson's care for punctuation. When Mammon is told that his stuff will shortly be changed to gold and silver, he replies, 'Silver, I care not for':¹ the comma was added in the Folio. And better still, when Surly is cross-questioning Mammon about the sham lord, Dol's supposed brother whom Mammon professes to know, although, when hard-pressed, he cannot recall his name, Surly asks 'What call you her, brother?' The modern punctuation would be 'her—brother',² and the actor could point the innuendo with a mocking emphasis. The comma is retained in the 1640 Folio, and two previous editors of the play note it as a misprint of the Folios.³

Generally the punctuation of both texts is careless, and we have had to make many small corrections to bring it up to Jonson's standard in the earlier plays.³

The Quarto preserves more of Jonson's classicized spelling of Latin derivatives, such as 'æquall' (I. i. 145), 'præcise' (ibid. 164), 'præuaricate' (II. iii. 19), and 'ædified' (III. i. 45), though its practice is not uniform.⁴ But it gives three misspellings which are impossible for Jonson—'Metaposcopie' (I. iii. 44), 'solæcisme' (IV. i. 101), and 'fæces' (IV. v. 31). The Folio copies these and adds 'labaratory' (IV. i. 171), which the Quarto spells correctly. A similar error is 'sapor stipstick' in both texts in II. v. 10; the 1640 Folio corrected to 'styptick'. Other errors of the Quarto reproduced in 1616 are—'No' for 'Now' (II. iii. 18), 'I haue trick' for 'a trick' (III. ii. 142), 'had' for 'he had' (V. v. 32), the omission of Face's name before his speeches in III. iii. 62 and IV. iv. 3, and the attribution of Dapper's speech to Face in V. iv. 60.

Textual changes in the Folio are slight. Most of them

² II. iii. 272.

³ See the critical apparatus at the Prologue, l. 18; I. i. 11, 25, 112, ii. 5, 26, 45, iii. 7, 43, 85, iv. 1, 9; II. i. 12, ii. 62, 67, 105, iii. 36, 43, 215, 269, 282, v. 18, 55, 60, 79, 86, vi. 34, 41, 58; III. i. 29, ii. 46, 102, 122, iii. 42, 66, 72; IV. i. 11, 53, 63, ii. 28, iii. 64, 88, 89, v. 74, vii. 28-9, 47, 64, 65; V. i. 28, iii. 33, iv. 44, v. 63, 94, 105.

⁴ Compare the examples noted in Sejanus, vol. iv, pp. 337-8.

are a toning down of phrases with a mildly Scriptural ring. 'Gods will!' is altered to 'Death on me!' in I. i. 148, and the attenuated 'Gad' to 'LOVE' in I. ii. 135; the language of the Puritans is retouched in several passages. 'They are the exercises of the spirit' disappears from Tribulation's speech at the beginning of the third act, and his 'Seed of Vipers, Sonnes of Belial' becomes 'seed of sulphure, sonnes of fire' (v. iii. 44). Similarly with Ananias: his 'vessels Of shame, and of dishonour' is changed to 'vessells Of pride, lust, and the cart' (v. v. 23-4), and even Nimrod, who was secular enough to be let alone, becomes 'Idol' (ibid., 99). These faint echoes of the Bible might, in Jonson's day, be censured as profane. Fortunately Ananias was permitted to testify at the close:

I am strong,
And will stand vp, well girt, against an host
That threaten GAD in exile.

No loss of filthy lucre could daunt the fortitude or dam the piety of this 'silenced saint'. And fortunately Jonson did not sacrifice Subtle's righteous indignation against 'the varlet that cossend the Apostles' (II. v. 72-3), though this was sufficiently explicit to be dangerous.

The oddest change is in Face's account of Dapper, the lawyer's clerk. In the Quarto he

Will take his oth, o' the Greeke Testament,
If need be, in his pocket. (I. ii. 56-7.)

Dapper might quite well carry a pocket Testament about with him to administer the oath to clients. But the Folio substitutes 'the greeke XENOPHON'. Some topical allusion may have given point to the joke, but it reads lamely now, even with Face's further assurance that Dapper 'can court His mistris, out of OVID'. Dapper shows no signs of acquaintance with the Ars Amatoria, and he certainly did not get the suggestion for wearing a leaden heart when his mistress forsook him¹ out of the Remedia Amoris.

¹ III. v. 45.

Other changes are to emphasize Mammon's refusal to employ for bawds any but fathers and mothers by inserting

They will do it best.

Best of all others.¹—

and to transpose two lines in Act II, scene iii, lines 221-4, which read in the Quarto :

FAC.² Stay man, what is she? FAC. A Lords Sister, Sir.

MAM. How! Pray thee stay? FAC. She's mad Sir, & sent hether—

(He'll be mad too. MAM. I warrant thee.) Why sent hether?

FAC. Sir, to be cur'd.

The Folio arrangement is—

MAM. How! 'Pray thee stay? FAC. She's mad, sir, and sent hether—

MAM. Stay, man, what is shee? FAC. A lords sister, sir, (Hee'll be mad too. MAM. I warrant thee.) Why sent hether?

FAC. Sir, to be cur'd.

We have followed Gifford in accepting the order of the Quarto; it is, as he says, much more natural. He thought the change an oversight; it was probably caused by the ὁμοιοτέλετον of 'sent hether' in two succeeding lines of the original text and by correcting 'FAC.' to 'MAM.'

The Folio of 1640 reprints the 1616 text, with hardly any alteration. Two lines

Faith, I haue a confidence in his good nature (i. ii. 115)

Were at the last thred, you see; and downe had gone

(iii. ii. 2)

are smoother metrically by the omission of 'a' in the first line and 'the' in the second. This Folio makes a few obvious corrections, but otherwise its tendency is to modernize the spelling and punctuation.

A facsimile of the Quarto text was published in the Noel Douglas Replicas in 1927 from the British Museum copy.

² A blunder for MAM.

The Folio text has also been reprinted. Dr. C. M. Hathaway edited it for the Yale Studies in English in 1903, no. XVII. He printed from Professor W. L. Phelps's copy, which he collated with the Hoe copy of the Quarto. In 1904 Professor Felix E. Schelling edited it for Heath's Belles Lettres series, in a very accurate text; in 1913 Dr. G. A. Smithson edited it in the second volume of Professor Gayley's Representative English Comedies. The last two modernize capitals and italic type, use the modern 'j' and 'v', and insert modern stage directions.

TO THE READER.

IF thou beest more, thou art an Vnderstander, and then I trust thee. If thou art one that tak'st vp, and but a Pretender, beware at what hands thou receiue'st thy commoditie ; for thou wert neuer more fair in the way to be cos'ned (then in this Age) in Poetry, especially in Playes : wherein, now, 5 the Concupiscence of Daunces, and Antickes so raigneth, as to runne away from Nature, and be afraid of her, is the onely point of art that tickles the Spectators. But how out of purpose, and place, doe I name Art ? when the Professors are growne so obstinate contemners of it, and presumers on their 10 owne Naturalls, as they are deriders of all diligence that way, and, by simple mocking at the termes, when they understand not the things, thinke to get of wittily with their Ignorance. Nay, they are esteem'd the more learned, and sufficient for this, by the Many, through their excellent vice of iudgement. For 15 they commend Writers, as they doe Fencers, or Wrastlers ; who if they come in robustuously, and put for it with a great deale of violence, are receiue'd for the brauer fellows : when many times their owne rudenesse is the cause of their disgrace, and a little touch of their Aduersary giues all that boisterous 20 force the foyle. I deny not, but that these men, who alwaies seeke to doe more then inough, may some time happen on some thing that is good, and great ; but very seldome : And when it comes it doth not recompence the rest of their ill. It sticks out perhaps, and is more eminent, because all is sordide, and 25 vile about it : as lights are more discern'd in a thick darknesse, then a faint shadow. I speake not this, out of a hope to doe good on any man, against his will ; for I know, if it were put to the question of theirs, and mine, the worse would finde more suffrages : because the most faviour common errors. But I 30 giue thee this warning, that there is a great difference between those, that (to gain the opinion of Copie) vtter all they can, how euer vnfitly ; and those that vse election, and a meane. For it is onely the disease of the vnskilfull, to thinke rude things greater then polish'd : or scatter'd more numerous then compos'd. 35

DOL. Not, afore night, I haue told 'hem, in a voice, Thorough the trunke, like one of your familiars. 5
But I haue spied sir EPICVRE MAMMON—— SVB.
Where?

DOL. Comming along, at far end of the lane,
Slow of his feet, but earnest of his tongue,
To one, that's with him. SVB. FACE, goe you, and shift.
DOL, you must presently make readie, too—— 10

DOL. Why, what's the matter? SVB. O, I did looke for him
With the sunnes rising : 'Maruaile, he could sleepe !
This is the day, I am to perfect for him
The magisterium, our great worke, the stone ;
And yeeld it, made, into his hands : of which, 15
He has, this month, talk'd, as he were possess'd.
And, now, hee's dealing peeces on't, away.
Me thinkes, I see him, entring ordinaries,
Dispensing for the poxe ; and plaguy-houses,
Reaching his dose ; walking more-fields for lepers ; 20
And offring citzens-wiues pomander-bracelets,
As his preseruatiue, made of the elixir ;
Searching the spittle, to make old bawdes yong ;

MAMMON, SVRLY.

Come on, sir. Now, you set your foot on shore
 In nouo orbe ; Here's the rich Peru :
 And there within, sir, are the golden mines,
 Great SALOMON'S Ophir ! He was sayling to't,
 5 Three yeeres, but we haue reach'd it in ten months.
 This is the day, wherein, to all my friends,
 I will pronounce the happy word, be rich.
 This day, you shall be spectatissimi.
 You shall no more deale with the hollow die,
 10 Or the fraile card. No more be at charge of keeping
 The liuery-punke, for the yong heire, that must Seale, at all houres, in his shirt. No more,
 If he denie, ha' him beaten to't, as he is That brings him the commoditie. No more

 Of veluet entrailes, for a rude-spun cloke,
 To be displaid at Madame AVGVST A's, make
 The sonnes of sword, and hazzard fall before
 The golden calfe, and on their knees, whole nights, 20 Commit idolatrie with wine, and trumpets :
 Or goe a feasting, after drum and ensigne.
 No more of this. You shall start vp yong Vice-royes,
 And haue your punques, and punquettees, my SVRLY.

But, much lesse charitie, should I gull my selfe.

S v B. Why, what haue you obseru'd, sir, in our art, 125

Seemes so impossible ? S v R. But your whole worke, no more.

That you should hatch gold in a fornace, sir,

As they doe egges, in Egypt ! S v B. Sir, doe you Beleeue that egges are hatch'd so ? S v R. If I should ?

S v B. Why, I thinke that the greater miracle. 130

No egge, but differs from a chicken, more,

Then mettalls in themselues. S v R. That cannot be.

The egg's ordain'd by nature, to that end :

And is a chicken in potentia.

S v B. The same we say of lead, and other mettalls, 135

Which would be gold, if they had time. M A M. And that

Our art doth funder. S v B. I, for 'twere absurd

To thinke that nature, in the earth, bred gold

Perfect, i'the instant. Something went before.

There must be remote matter. S v R. I, what is that ? 140

S v B. Mary, we say—— M A M. I, now it heats : stand Father.

Pound him to dust—— S v B. It is, of the one part,
A humide exhalation, which we call

Materia liquida, or the vinctuous water ;

145 On th'other part, a certaine crasse, and viscous
Portion of earth ; both which, concorporate,
Doe make the elementarie matter of gold :
Which is not, yet, propria materia,
But commune to all mettalls, and all stones.

150 For, where it is forsaken of that moysture,
And hath more drynesse, it becomes a stone ;
Where it retaines more of the humid fatnesse,
It turnes to sulphur, or to quick-siluer :
Who are the parents of all other mettalls.

155 Nor can this remote matter, sodainly,
Progresse so from extreme, vnto extreme,
As to grow gold, and leape ore all the meanes.
Nature doth, first, beget th'imperfect ; then Proceedes shee to the perfect. Of that ayrie,

160 And oily water, mercury is engendred ;
Sulphure o'the fat, and earthy part : the one (Which is the last) supplying the place of male,
The other of the female, in all mettalls.

Some doe beleeeue hermaphrodeitie,

165 That both doe act, and suffer. But, these two
Make the rest ductile, malleable, extensiuue.
And, euen in gold, they are ; for we doe find Seedes of them, by our fire, and gold in them :
And can produce the species of each mettall

170 More perfect thence, then nature doth in earth.
Beside, who doth not see, in daily practice,
Art can beget bees, hornets, beetles, waspes,
Out of the carcasses, and dung of creatures ;
Yea, scorpions, of an herbe, being ritely plac'd :

CATILINE

THE TEXT

The first edition of the tragedy of Catiline was not entered on the Stationers' Register. It was published by Walter Burre in 1611 with the title Catiline his Conspiracy. The printer is unknown. The collation, A to N in fours with three leaves of O, is in detail: A 1 recto, title-page; A 1 verso, blank; A 2, dedication to Lord Pembroke; A 3 recto, 'To the Reader in ordinary' and 'To the Reader extraordinary'; A 3 verso, a complimentary poem by Francis Beaumont and part of a similar poem by John Fletcher; A 4 recto, Fletcher's poem concluded, and a poem by Nathan Field; A 4 verso, 'The names of the Actors'; B to O 3 verso, the text of the play. The running title is 'CATYLINE'.

Five copies of the Quarto have been collated for the text of the present edition:

The British Museum copy, with shelf-mark 644.b.55 (marked A in the following list);

The Bodleian copy, with shelf-mark Malone 188 (6) (marked B);

The copy in the Cambridge University Library, with shelf-mark Syn. 7-61-12, inscribed at the bottom of the last page in a seventeenth-century hand 'for the much honorid my very good Lord the Earle of Bristow; these presentes' (marked C);

The copy in the Dyce Library (marked D);

Mr. T. J. Wise's copy (marked E).

In addition, Mr. C. K. Edmonds, who has collated the Devonshire and Bridgewater copies of the Quarto in the Huntington Library, has supplied variants in the inner forme of D. Jonson's proof-corrections may well have extended to other sheets of the Quarto, but the variants we have been able to trace are as follows:

The twenty-seven corrections in the inner forme of I show Jonson's characteristic vigilance. The four corrections in the outer forme of B show a second reading of the proof on B 4 verso where Jonson's final correction was a metrical apostrophe in the words 'They'had' in Act 1, line 268. The type-correction of the large initial capital for the opening lines of the first chorus on C 4 verso is a signal instance of Jonson's exactness; the other choruses start with a similar capital. The catchword 'FvL.' on signature D 4 recto is without the stop in the Dyce and Wise copies; probably this is only a failure to print it.

The Folio text of 1616 was printed from a revised copy of the Quarto. There are few changes of reading, as if Jonson found little to correct in what he believed to be his best tragedy.¹ There are retouchings of single words, as in the demand of the blood-thirsty Cethegus, 'Swell mee my bowle yet fuller' for 'Crowne me my bowle' (l. 499), where Jonson dropped Virgil's 'Vina coronant'.² The most striking alteration is in Act III, line 729—'To betray headie husbands' for the more violent expression of the Quarto, 'To strangle head-strong Husbands'. But Jonson completely recast the punctuation in order to bring it into line with the system he adopted in the Folio; his minute and incessant changes are recorded in the critical apparatus except where there is an obvious loss of a stop in the Quarto. He inserted freely the note of exclamation, the dash, and the bracket for parentheses; and he employed far more sparingly the inverted commas used at the beginning of a 'sentence' or aphorism.¹ The metrical apostrophe once more gave trouble to the printer.² We have inserted it on the authority of the Quarto in the following passages where it has disappeared in the Folio:

² We are reminded of the lyric in Poetaster, III. i. 8, 'Swell me a bowle with lustie wine'.

BESTIA, ' AVTRONIVS (I. 156)
 —thou' art (III. 214)³
 we' intend (III. 555) to' you (v. 43)
 to' vs (v. 397)
 the' immortall gods (v. 693).

The printer's difficulties are shown by his absurd substitution of a comma in the Quarto text of Act v, line 602, 'by, a sword', which was promptly corrected, and by his omission of a comma where the two stops coincided in 'No' in troth' (II. 75) and 'practise on me' or finde' (II. 248). In such passages as 'And that hath plac'd thee, CICERO, at the helme' (III. 62) and 'These things for mine owne glorie, and false greatnesse' (IV. 78), Jonson's manuscript probably had 'CICERO', at' and 'glorie', and', but, as Jonson himself passed the text for the press, we have left the responsibility with him. In such minutiae he here fell far below his rigid standard of correctness. It is something of a shock to find that we have had to make nearly fifty corrections, most of them, of course, extremely trivial.⁴ There are hardly any serious blunders; the only noteworthy one is 'engines' for 'engineers' (III. 760), which was corrected by Gifford. It is as if Jonson, secure of the text as a whole and feeling that it needed little revision, read his proofs too rapidly.

³ 'thou'rt' in Q; 'thou'art' in F2.

⁴ The curious may track them out in the critical apparatus at I. 291, 297, 459, 527; II. 57, 75, 178, 248, 273, 285; III. 114, 148, 207, 216, 219, 342, 408, 413, 684, 759, 760, 862, 874; IV. 62, 325, 382, 504, 596, 727, 730, 732, 764, 806, 824, 833; V. 148, 214, 220, 327, 402, 413, 427, 451, 496, 498, 521, 571, 577, 578.

A second Quarto was published in 1635, two years before Jonson's death. It was printed by Nicholas Okes for John Spenser, who had acquired the copyright from Mistress Burre in 1630. Probably Jonson knew nothing about it. The collation is: A 1, blank; A 2 recto, the title-page; A 3 recto, 'To the Reader'; A 3 verso, Beaumont's poem, and part of Fletcher's; A 4 recto, Fletcher's poem continued, and Field's poem; A 4 verso, 'The names of the Actors'; B to M in fours, the text of the play. For this edition the first Quarto served as copy, not, as would certainly have been the case if Jonson had been consulted, the revised text of the Folio.

The 1635 Quarto is a grossly careless reprint, and we have not judged it necessary to encumber the critical apparatus with the misreadings, numbering well over a hundred, with which Okes corrupted the text. He omitted two lines;¹ he printed a line of Petreius's speech²—

The rest are a mixt kind, all sorts of furies—in the unmetrical form, 'The rest are but a mixt kinde, of all sorts of furies'; and he wrecked the passage where Cicero asks Lentulus in the Senate if he recognized the seal on his intercepted letter—

L E N. Yes, it is mine. C I C. Whose image is that, on it?

L E N. My grand-fathers. C I C. What, that renown'd good man,—³

by omitting 'Whose image is that, on it?' and substituting 'What, that renown'd good man?' which he printed at the end of both lines. When Catiline tells the conspirators of Marius' standard which he worshipped in a shrine built

Of purpose to it. Pledge then all your hands,
To follow it, with vows of death, and ruine,
Strooke silently, and home.—⁴

Okes printed nonsense by leaving out the words 'Pledge

² v. 44.

⁴ III. 569-71.

then all your hands, To follow it'. He constantly drops single words, usually monosyllables, to the detriment of the metre : thus, 'A small praise, and that wrung out by force'¹ should be 'A most small praise'. Misreadings which he foisted into the text include 'salvation' for 'salutation' (I. 201), 'feelee thirst' for 'fell thirst' (ibid., 492), 'unconstant' for 'constant' (II. 159), 'fall' for 'all' (III. 460), 'covenant' for 'conuent' (IV. 295), 'prodigallity' for 'prodigally' (ibid., 668). His worst blunder, because this was a deliberate tampering with the text, is at the point where Catiline sends Vargunteius to hold Cethegus back from an ill-advised attempt to fire Cicero's house at night.² The first Quarto reads :

CAT. Follow him, Vargunteius, . . .

. . . Intreat, and coniure him.

In all our names. LEN. By all our vowes, and friendships.

These words end the page on signature H recto. H verso begins with a scene heading, SEMPRONIA, AVRELIA, FVLVIA, to them.

The formula 'To them' is a frequent stage direction in the Folio ; it marks the entrance of a new character or characters, and saves repeating the names of those already on the stage. But this being the only time Jonson used it in the Quarto, Okes did not know what to make of it. Finding it in roman lower-case, like the body of the text, he decided that it was wrongly taken over from the speech on the previous page ; so he printed

LEN. By all our vowes and friendships to them.—

ignoring the troublesome detail that the pronoun 'them' had nothing to refer to grammatically in the context.

The Folio of 1640 was printed from its predecessor of 1616. From time to time it revises the punctuation, though it frequently omits the metrical apostrophe. There are some careless misprints : for example, 'Circes' for 'Circei' (I.

² III. 674 foll.

390); 'bend Upon occasion' for 'bend Vnto occasion' (III. 196); 'the old porter TITAN' for 'old potter' as a description of Prometheus (ibid., 542); and 'How dost thou heare this?' for 'beare this' (IV. 362). It makes one attempt at an emendation—

I could desire, grave Fathers, to be found for

I could desire, Fathers, to be found—treating 'desire' as a dissyllable through not understanding Jonson's pronunciation.¹

In one respect the text of Catiline is unique. Two quarto editions were published at the Restoration. It was produced at the Theatre Royal on 18 December 1668, and Pepys, who saw it on the second day, described it as 'the least diverting' play he had ever seen. Hart played Catiline, Mohun Cethegus, Burt Cicero, Mrs. Corey Sempronius, and Nell Gwyn spoke a prologue 'Merrily' 'in an Amazonian habit'. It was published next year, 'Printed for A. C.', i.e. Andrew Crooke, 'and are to be sold by William Cademan at the Pope's Head in the Lower walk of the New-Exchange. 1669'. It was published in February, 'Price 1s', according to the entry in the Term Catalogues. Crooke had, with John Legatt, acquired the copyright of Bartholomew Fair and The Staple of News from Allot in 1637; he probably acquired the copyright of The Devil is an Ass in 1640.² The collation, A to M in fours, is in detail: A 1 blank; A 2 recto, title-page; A 2 verso, blank; A 3 recto, Nell Gwyn's prologue; A 3 verso, 'THE EPILOGVE, By the same'; A 4 recto, 'The Persons of the Play'; A 4 verso, 'The Principal Tragœdians'; B to M, the text of the Play. On M 4 verso, after 'The End' is appended the list, taken from the 1616 Folio, of 'The principal Tragœdians, when first Acted in the year 1611'. The interesting fact about this Quarto is that it aims at being a reprint of the 1616 Folio; it modernizes the spelling, but it often retains

² See S. G. Dunn in The Times Literary Supplement, 28 July 1921.

Jonson's peculiar punctuation, which was obsolete in 1669. There are some bad misprints. In i. 297-8 'Dare they looke day In the dull face?' is not improved by printing 'In the full face'. But there is one interesting attempt at an emendation: the alexandrine in Act v, line 427,

With money to corrupt the poore artificers is normalized to blank verse by omitting 'poore'. At two points in the play an omission has been stamped in after the text had been printed off: the letter s in 'gin's to move' (III. 761) and the words 'and he', which had dropped out at the end of Act iv, line 792.

The 1669 Quarto was reprinted in 1674 (1) with an identical title-page, (2) with the imprint:

Printed for William Crook, at the green Dragon without Temple-bar. 1674.

The Term Catalogues announce it as published in July. The actor list of the 1668 revival was omitted. The collation is A², B-L⁴. All that this Quarto does is to add a new crop of misprints; one effort to correct a faulty reading may be quoted. In Act III, l. 454, 'And lay it to thy brest, how much the gods', the 1669 Quarto printed 'host' for 'how'; the printer of 1674, seeing that 'host' was nonsense, thought he had restored sense by printing 'haste'.

The Folio text of 1616 was reprinted by Dr. Lynn Harold Harris in Yale Studies in English, no. LIII, in 1916; the proof-reading is careless, especially in the matter of dropped words; the critical apparatus is inaccurate; and the existence of the third Quarto is unknown to the editor.

The Muses forbid, that I should restrayne your medling, whom I see alreadie busie with the Title, and tricking ouer the leaues : It is your owne. I departed with my right, when I let it first abroad. And, now, so secure an Interpreter I am of my chance, that neither praise, nor dispraise from you can affect mee. Though you commend the two first Actes, with the people, because they are the worst ; and dislike the Oration of Cicero, in regard you read some pieces of it, at Schoole, and understand them not yet ; I shall finde the way to forgiue you. Be anything you will be, at your owne charge. Would I had deseru'd but halfe so well of it in translation, as that ought to deserue of you in iudgment, if you haue any. I know you will pretend (whosoeuer you are) to haue that, and more. But all pretences are not iust claymes. The commendation of good things may fall within a many, their approbation but in a few ; for the most commend out of affection, selfe tickling, an easinesse, or imitation : but men iudge only out of knowledge. That is the trying faculty. And, to those works that will beare a Iudge, nothing is more dangerous then a foolish prayse. You will say I shall not haue yours, therfore ; but rather the contrary, all vexation of Censure. If I were not about such molestations now, I had great cause to think vnworthily of my studies, or they had so of mee. But I leaue you to your exercise. Beginne.

To the Reader extraordinary.

 That a third man, of that great family,
 Whereof he is descended, the C O R N E L I I,

 Goe on vpon the gods, kisse lightning, wrest
 The engine from the C Y C L O P's, and giue fire
 At face of a full cloud, and stand his ire : 145
 When I would bid him moue. Others there are,
 Whom enuy to the state drawes, and puts on,
 For contumelies receiu'd, (and such are sure ones)

 From their owne crimes, be factious, as from ours.

LENTVLVS, CETHGVVS, CATILINE.

IT is, me thinks, a morning, full of fate !
It riseth slowly, as her sollen carre
Had all the weights of sleepe, and death hung at it !
Shee is not rosy-finger'd, but swolne black !
Her face is like a water, turn'd to bloud, 195
And her sick head is bound about with clouds,
As if shee threatned night, ere noone of day !
It does not looke, as it would haue a haile,
Or health, wish'd in it, as on other mornes.

CET. Why, all the fitter, LENTVLVS : our comming 200
Is not for salutation, we haue business.

CAT. Said nobly, braue CETHGVVS. Where's AV-TRONIVS ?

CET. Is he not come ? CAT. Not here. CET. Nor VARGVNTIVS ?

CAT. Neither. CET. A fire in their beds, and bosomes,
That so will serue their sloth, rather then vertue. 205
They are no Romanes, and at such high need
As now. LEN. Both they, LONGINVS, LECCA, CVRIVS,

FVLVIVS, GABINIVS, gaue me word, last night,
By LVCIVS BESTIA, they would all be here,
And early. CET. Yes ? As you, had I not call'd you. 210
Come, we all sleepe, and are meere dormice ; flies,
A little lesse then dead : more dulnesse hangs
On vs, then on the morne. W'are spirit-bound,
In ribs of ice ; our whole blouds are one stone ;
And honor cannot thaw vs ; nor our wants : 215
Though they burne, hot as feuers, to our states.

CAT. I muse they would be tardy, at an houre
Of so great purpose. CET. If the gods had call'd
Them, to a purpose, they would iust haue come

 Whole heaps of limmes, and bodies, through his arch.
 No age was spar'd, no sexe. C A T. Nay, no degree.
- 240 C E T. Not infants, in the porch of life were free.
 The sick, the old, that could but hope a day Longer, by natures bountie, not let stay.
 Virgins, and widdowes, matrons, pregnant wiues,
 All dyed. C A T. 'Twas crime inough, that they had liues.
- 245 To strike but onely those, that could doe hurt,
 Was dull, and poore. Some fell to make the number,
 As some the prey. C E T. The rugged C H A R O N fainted,
 And ask'd a nauy, rather then a boate,
 To ferry ouer the sad world that came :
- 250 The mawes, and dens of beasts could not receiue
 The bodies, that those soules were frighted from ;
 And e'en the graues were fild with men, yet liuing,

CHORVS.

Great father MARS, and greater IOVE,
 By whose high auspice, Rome hath stood
 So long ; and, first, was built in blood 365
 Of your great nephew, that then stroue
 Not with his brother, but your rites :
 Be present to her now, as then,
 And let not proud, and factious men
 Against your wills oppose their mights. 370
 Our Consuls, now, are to be made ;
 O, put it in the publique voice
 To make a free, and worthy choice :
 Excluding such as would inuade
 The common wealth. Let whom we name 375
 Haue wisdom, fore-sight, fortitude,
 Be more with faith, then face endu'd,
 And studie conscience, about fame.
 Such, as not seeke to get the start
 In state, by power, parts, or bribes, 380
 Ambition's bawdes : but moue the tribes
 By vertue, modestie, desert.
 Such, as to iustice will adhere,
 What euer great one it offend :
 And from the'embraced truth not bend 385
 For enuy, hatred, gifts, or feare.
 That, by their deeds, will make it knowne,
 Whose dignitie they doe sustaine ;
 And life, state, glorie, all they gaine,
 Count the republikes, not their owne. 390
 Such the old BRVTI, DECII were,
 The CIPRI, CVRTII, who did giue
 Themselues for Rome : and would not liue,
 As men, good, only for a yeere.
 Such were the great CAMILLI, too ; 395
 The FABII, SCIPIO's ; that still thought

No worke, at price inough, was bought,
 That for their countrey they could doe.
 And, to her honor, so did knit ;
 400 As all their acts were vnderstood
 The sinewes of the publike good :
 And they themselues, one soule, with it.
 These men were truely magistrates ;
 These neither practis'd force, nor formes :
 405 Nor did they leaue the helme, in stormes !
 And such they are make happy states.

 CRASSVS, CÆSAR, CHORVS, LICTORS.

Great honors are great burdens : but, on whom They're cast with enuie, he doth beare two loades.
 His cares must still be double to his ioyes,
 In any dignitie ; where, if he erre,
 5 He findes no pardon : and, for doing well
 A most small praise, and that wrung out by force.
 I speake this, Romanes, knowing what the weight Of the high charge, you'haue trusted to me, is.
 Not, that thereby I would with art decline
 10 The good, or greatnesse of your benefit ;
 For, I ascribe it to your singular grace,
 And vow, to owe it to no title else,
 Except the gods, that C I C E R O' is your Consul.

 Wearied, and gall'd with their necessities,

 Would not the barbarous deeds haue beene beleeu'd, 270
 Of M A R I V S, and S Y L L A, by our children, Without this fact had rise forth greater, for them ?
 All, that they did, was pietie, to this !
 They, yet, but murdred kinsfolke, brothers, parents,
 Rauish'd the virgins, and, perhaps, some matrons ; 275
 They left the citie standing, and the temples :

HOW now? Is he come? LIC. He's here, my lord.

CIC. Go presently,

Pray my colleague ANTONIVS, I may speake with him, 310

About some present businesse of the state ;

And (as you goe) call on my brother QVINTVS,

And pray him, with the Tribunes to come to me.

FVL. It is my dutie. CIC. O, my noble lord ! 315

Leaue, to demand the cause of so much strangenesse.

CAES. It is reported here, you are the head To a strange faction, LVCIVS. CIC. I, and will Be prou'd against him. CATI. Let it be. Why, Consul, 150
If in the common-wealth, there be two bodies,
One leane, weake, rotten, and that hath a head ;
The other strong, and healthfull, but hath none :
If I doe giue it one, doe I offend ?

Restore your selues, vnto your temper, Fathers ; 155
And, without perturbation, heare me speake.

Remember who I am, and of what place,
What petty fellow this is, that opposes ;
One, that hath exercis'd his eloquence,
Still to the bane of the nobilitie : 160

A boasting, insolent tongue-man. CATO. Peace, leud traytor,

Or wash thy mouth. He is an honest man
And loues his country, would thou didst so, too.

CATI. CATO, you are too zealous for him. CATO.
No ;

Thou art too impudent. CATV. CATILINE, be silent. 165

CATI. Nay then, I easily feare, my iust defence
Will come too late, to so much preiudice.

(CAES. Will he sit downe ?) CATI. Yet, let the world forsake me,

My innocence must not. CATO. Thou innocent ?
So are the Furies. CIC. Yes, and Ate, too. 170

Do'st thou not blush, pernicious CATILINE ?

Or, hath the palenesse of thy guilt drunke vp Thy blood, and drawne thy veines, as drie of that,

 Do'st thou not feele thy counsell all laid open ?

 185 With each mans knowledge ? which of all this order Canst thou thinke ignorant (if they'll but vtter Their conscience to the right) of what thou didst
 Last night, what on the former, where thou wert, Whom thou didst call together, what your plots were ?
 190 O age, and manners ! This the Consul sees,
 The Senate vnderstands, yet this man liues !
 Liues ? I, and comes here into counsell with vs ;
 Partakes the publike cares : and with his eye
 Markes, and points out each man of vs to slaughter.
 195 And we, good men, doe satisfie the state,
 If we can shunne but this mans sword, and madnesse.
 There was that vertue, once, in Rome, when good men
 Would, with more sharpe coërcion, haue restrain'd
 A wicked citizen, then the deadliest foe.
 200 We haue that law still, CATILINE, for thee ;
 An act as graue, as sharpe : The state's not wanting,
 Nor the authoritie of this Senate ; we,
 We, that are Consuls, onely faile our selues.
 This twentie dayes, the edge of that decree 205 We haue let dull, and rust ; kept it shut vp,

 Of thy conspiracie : if all breake out,
 All be discouered, change thy mind at last,

 That such a day, thy Lictor, C A I V S M A N L I V S,
 Would be in armes. Was I deceiued, C A T I L I N E ?
 Or in the fact, or in the time ? the houre ?

 Thou would'st content thee, with the murder of vs,

Dar'st thou denie this ? wherefore art thou silent ?
 Speake, and this shall conuince thee : Here they are,
 I see 'hem, in this Senate, that were with thee. 270
 O, you immortall gods ! in what clime are we ?
 What region doe we liue in ? in what ayre ?
 What common-wealth, or state is this we haue ?
 Here, here, amongst vs, our owne number, Fathers,
 In this most holy counsell of the world, 275
 They are, that seeke the spoyle of me, of you,
 Of ours, of all ; what I can name 's too narrow :
 Follow the sunne, and find not their ambition.
 These I behold, being Consul ; nay, I aske
 Their counsell of the state, as from good Patriots : 280
 Whom it were fit the axe should hew in pieces,
 I not so much as wound, yet, with my voyce.
 Thou wast, last night, with LECCA, CATILINE,
 Your shares, of Italie, you there diuided ;
 Appointed who, and whither, each should goe ; 285
 What men should stay behind, in Rome, were chosen ;
 Your offices set downe ; the parts mark'd out,
 And places of the citie, for the fire ;
 Thy selfe (thou'affirm'd'st) wast readie to depart,
 Onely, a little let there was, that stay'd thee, 290
 That I yet liu'd. Vpon the word, stept forth
 Three of thy crew, to rid thee of that care ;
 Two vnder-tooke this morning, before day,
 To kill me in my bed. All this I knew,
 Your conuent scarce dismiss'd, arm'd all my seruants, 295
 Call'd both my brother, and friends, shut out your clients,
 You sent to visite me ; whose names I told
 To some there, of good place, before they came.

CATO. Yes, I, and QVINTVS CATVLVS can affirme it.

CAES. He's lost, and gone. His spirits haue forsooke
 him. 300

CIC. If this be so, why, CATILINE, do'st thou stay ?

- Goe, where thou mean'st. The ports are open ; forth.
 The campe abroad wants thee, their chiefe, too long.
 Lead with thee all thy troupes out. Purge the citie.
- 305 Draw drie that noysome, and pernicious sinke,
 Which left, behind thee, would infect the world.
 Thou wilt free me of all my feares, at once,
 To see a wall betweene vs. Do'st thou stop
 To doe that now, commanded ; which before,
- 310 Of thine owne choice, thou'rt prone to ? Goe. The Consul Bids thee, an enemie, to depart the citie.
 Whither, thou'lt aske ? to exile ? I not bid Thee that. But aske my counsell, I perswade it.
 What is there, here, in Rome, that can delight thee ?
- 315 Where not a soule, without thine owne foule knot,
 But feares, and hates thee. What domesticke note
 Of priuate filthinesse, but is burnt in Into thy life ? What close, and secret shame,
 But is growne one, with thy knowne infamy ?
- 320 What lust was euer absent from thine eyes ?
 What leud fact from thy hands ? what wickednesse
 From thy whole body ? where's that youth drawne in Within thy nets, or catch'd vp with thy baits,
 Before whose rage, thou hast not borne a sword,
- 325 And to whose lusts thou hast not held a torch ?
 Thy latter nuptialls I let passe in silence ;
 Where sinnes incredible, on sinnes, were heap't :
 Which I not name, lest, in a ciuill state,
 So monstrous facts should either appeare to be,
- 330 Or not to be reueng'd. Thy fortunes, too,
 I glance not at, which hang but till next Ides.
 I come to that, which is more knowne, more publike ;
 The life, and safetie of vs all, by thee Threatned, and sought. Stood'st thou not in the field,
- 335 When LEPIDVS, and TULLVS were our Consuls, Vpon the day of choice, arm'd, and with forces,

To take their liues, and our chiefe citizens ?
 When, not thy feare, nor conscience chang'd thy mind,
 But the meere fortune of the common-wealth
 With-stood thy actiue malice ? Speake but right. 340
 How often hast thou made attempt on me ?
 How many of thy assaults haue I declin'd
 With shifting but my body (as wee'ld say) Wrested thy dagger from thy hand, how oft ?
 How often hath it falne, or slip't by chance ? 345
 Yet, can thy side not want it : which, how vow'd,
 Or with what rites, 'tis sacred of thee, I know not,
 That still thou mak'st it a necessitie,
 To fixe it in the body of a Consul.
 But let me loose this way, and speake to thee, 350
 Not as one mou'd with hatred, which I ought,
 But pittie, of which none is owing thee.

CAT. No more then vnto TANTALVS, or TITYVS.

CIC. Thou cam'st, e're-while, into this Senate. Who
 Of such a frequency, so many friends, 355
 And kindred thou hast here, saluted thee ?
 Were not the seates made bare, vpon thy entrance ?
 Riss' not the consular men ? and left their places,
 So soone as thou sat'st downe ? and fled thy side,
 Like to a plague, or ruine ? knowing, how oft 360
 They had beene, by thee, mark'd out for the shambles ?
 How dost thou beare this ? Surely, if my slaues
 At home fear'd me, with halfe th'affright, and horror,
 That, here, thy fellow-citizens doe thee,
 I should soone quit my house, and thinke it need too. 365
 Yet thou dar'st tarry here ? Goe forth, at last ;
 Condemne thy selfe to flight, and solitude.
 Discharge the common-wealth, of her deepe feare.
 Goe ; into banishment, if thou wait'st the word.
 Why do'st thou looke ? They all consent vnto it. 370

 They approue it ; while they suffer it, they decree it ;
 And while they're silent to it, they proclaime it.

- 395 This is, to giue him libertie, and power :
 Rather, thou should'st lay hold vpon him, send him

 To these so holy voices, thus I answer.

 But should cry out, he saw, touch'd, felt, and grasp't it. 410
 Then, when he hath runne out himselfe ; led forth
 His desp'rate partie with him ; blowne together
 Aides of all kindes, both shipwrack'd mindes and fortunes :
 Not onely the growne euill, that now is sprung,
 And sprouted forth, would be pluck'd vp, and weeded ; 415

 Our cares, and feares might seeme a while relieu'd,

PETREIUS.

The Armie.

IT is my fortune, and my glorie, Souldiers,
 This day, to lead you on ; the worthy Consul
 Kept from the honor of it, by disease :
 And I am proud, to haue so braue a cause
 To exercise your armes in. We not, now, 5 Fight for how long, how broad, how great, and large Th'extent, and bounds o'th' people of Rome shall be ;
 But to retaine what our great ancestors,
 With all their labours, counsellis, arts, and actions,
 For vs, were purchasing so many yeeres. 10
 The quarrell is not, now, of fame, of tribute,
 Or of wrongs, done vnto confederates,
 For which, the armie of the people of Rome
 Was wont to moue : but for your owne republique,
 For the rais'd temples of th'immortall gods, 15
 For all your fortunes, altars, and your fires,
 For the deare soules of your lou'd wiues, and children,
 Your parents tombes, your rites, lawes, libertie,
 And, briefly, for the safety of the world :
 Against such men, as onely by their crimes 20
 Are knowne ; thrust out by riot, want, or rashnesse.
 One sort, SYLLA's old troops, left here in Fesulæ,
 Who sodainely made rich, in those dire times,
 Are since, by their vn-bounded, vast expence,
 Growne needy, and poore : and haue but left t'expect, 25
 From CATILINE, new bills, and new proscriptions.
 These men (they say) are valiant ; yet, I thinke 'hem
 Not worth your pause : For either their old vertue
 Is, in their sloth, and pleasures lost ; or, if It tarry with 'hem, so ill match to yours, 30
 As they are short in number, or in cause.

In great affaires, and doubtfull, it behooues
Men, that are ask'd their sentence, to be free

For, where the least of these doe hinder, there
The mind not easily discernes the truth.
I speake this to you, in the name of Rome,
For whom you stand ; and to the present cause :
That this foule fact of L E N T V L V S, and the rest, 455
Weigh not more with you, then your dignitie ;
And you be more indulgent to your passion,
Then to your honor. If there could be found
A paine, or punishment, equall to their crimes,
I would deuise, and helpe : but, if the greatnesse 460
Of what they ha' done, exceed all mans inuention,
I thinke it fit, to stay, where our lawes doe.
Poore pettie states may alter, vpon humour,
Where, if they'offend with anger, few doe know it,
Because they are obscure ; their fame, and fortune 465

- Head of the world, and liue in that seene height,
 All mankind knowes their actions. So wee see,
 The greater fortune hath the lesser licence.
 They must nor fauour, hate, and least be angrie :
 For what with others is call'd anger, there,
 Is crueltie, and pride. I know SYLLANVS,
 Who spoke before me, a iust, valiant man,
 A louer of the state, and one that would not,
 In such a businesse, vse or grace, or hatred ;
 I know, too, well, his manners, and modestie :
 Nor doe I thinke his sentence cruell (for 'Gainst such delinquents, what can be too bloudie ?)
 But that it is abhorring from our state ;
 Since to a citizen of Rome, offending,
 Our lawes giue exile, and not death. Why then Decrees he that ? 'Twere vaine to thinke, for feare ;
 When, by the diligence of so worthy a Consul,
 All is made safe, and certaine. Is't for punishment ?
 Why, death's the end of euills, and a rest,
 Rather then torment : It dissolues all griefes.
 And beyond that, is neither care, nor ioy.
 You heare, my sentence would not haue 'hem die.
 How then ? set free, and increase CATILINES armie ?
 So will they, being but banish'd. No, graue Fathers,
 I iudge 'hem, first, to haue their states confiscate,
 Then, that their persons remaine prisoners
 I'the free townes, farre off from Rome, and seuer'd :
 Where they might neither haue relation,
 Hereafter, to the Senate, or the people.
 Or, if they had, those townes, then, to be mulcted,
 As enemies to the state, that had their guard.

 With faces, as you trusted to the gods,

PET. The streights, and needs of CATILINE being such,
As he must fight, with one of the two armies, 630
That then had neere enclos'd him ; It pleas'd Fate,
To make vs th'object of his desperate choise,
Wherein the danger almost paiz'd the honor :
And as he riss', the day grew black with him ;
And Fate descended neerer to the earth, 635
As if shee meant, to hide the name of things,
Vnder her wings, and make the world her quarrie.
At this we rous'd, lest one small minutes stay
Had left it to be'enquir'd, what Rome was.
And (as we ought) arm'd in the confidence 640
Of our great cause, in forme of battaile, stood.
Whilst CATILINE came on, not with the face
Of any man, but of a publique ruine :
His count'nance was a ciuill warre it selfe.
And all his host had standing in their lookes, 645
The palenesse of the death, that was to come.
Yet cryed they out like vultures, and vrg'd on,
As if they would precipitate our fates.
Nor staid we longer for 'hem ; But himselfe
Strooke the first stroke : And, with it, fled a life. 650
Which cut, it seem'd, a narrow necke of land,
Had broke betweene two mightie seas ; and either Flow'd into other ; for so did the slaughter :
And whirl'd about, as when two violent tides
Meet, and not yeeld. The Furies stood, on hills, 655
Circling the place, and trembled to see men
Doe more, then they : whilst pietie left the field,
Grieu'd for that side, that, in so bad a cause,
They knew not, what a crime their valour was.

Romans, I now am paid for all my labours,
My watchings, and my dangers. Here conclude 695
Your praises, triumphs, honors, and rewards,
Decreed to me : only the memorie
Of this glad day, if I may know it liue
Within your thoughts, shall much affect my conscience,
Which I must alwayes studie before fame. 700

And euer is ill got, without the first.

CYNTHIA'S REVELS

Outer forme of C

- p. 6, l. 23. Sig. C 1 recto. In 1. iii. 38 transpose the readings of B, D to the first column.
- p. 7, ll. 31, 32. The one reading of C 3 verso should have been given as a correction of the inner forme and printed on page 8 after line 10.
- pp. 6-8. There are four states in the outer forme of C: (1) B, which has two readings (1. iii. 25, 27) altered in all the other copies, (2) D, which, after correcting these two readings, retains most of the other original readings; (3) E, which retains the original reading at 1. iv. 73, 120, while correcting all the others; (4) A, C, which are correct throughout.

Inner forme of D

- p. 8, ll. 11, 12. Transpose the readings of D and A, B, C. Probably the printer originally set 'mouth. Hee's', was directed to alter the period to a comma, but failed to remove the capital 'H'.

Outer forme of F

- pp. 8-12. There are three states of the text: (1) the Dyce copy (C), as is shown by two readings 'Houres' for 'Houers' (iii. iv. 45) and

'Cart:' for 'Court:' (III. v. 75); (2) the Huntington copy (E), which prints the colon after 'himselfe' at III. iv. 19; (3) the British Museum, Bodleian, and Wise copies (A, B, D). The C readings should be transposed to the first column.

Inner forme of F

pp. 12-16. Here again C represents one state and A, B, D, E another state. The correction of the signature E 2 (C) to F 2 (A, B, D, E) tells in favour of A, B, D, E being the second state, and, if so, the C readings should be transposed to the first column.

But, alike in the outer and the inner forme of F, these readjustments involve serious difficulty. They reveal a number of bad mis-corrections. To begin with there is a liberal sprinkling of wrong fount in the punctuation. The roman stops are wrongly corrected to italic in 'Presence:' (III. ii. 31), 'Sparke?' (I. 45), 'Fanne:' (III. iv. 70), 'place:' (I. 81), 'eares?' (III. iii. 9), 'me?' (I. 18), 'hearing:' (I. 22), 'stir'd:' (I. 24), 'friends?' (III. iv. 2), 'So?' (III. v. 40). Popular spellings are substituted for those which Jonson is likely to have used in 'deuided' for 'diuided' (III. iv. 47), 'howers' for 'houres' where the metre condemns the dissyllable (I. 92), 'coulored' for 'coloured' (III. v. 77), 'pursew' and 'pursewd' for 'pursue' and 'pursude' (III. iv. 106, v. 103). The re-spelling is intelligible, but what of the punctuation? As the printer originally used a wrong-fount capital 'T' seven times on F 2 recto, it is clear that his stock of this letter failed when he was setting up the inner forme: he had it in use for another book. He corrected this defect, or Jonson made him correct it. But was he in a similar difficulty over his roman stops, taking them out of the text and not replacing them? He made other blunders when he had to correct a crowded line: in Act III, scene ii, lines 63-5—my heart, he hates such barren shifts, yet to doe thee a pleasure—he corrected the comma after 'shifts' to a semicolon and altered 'heart' to 'hart', taking out the e to justify the spacing; in Act III, scene 5, line 4—

Tis wel enterd sir. Stay, you come on too fast, your Pace is too—
he corrected to 'Tis wel enter'd Sir' and removed the comma after 'Stay' to save space afterwards; in line 10—hath sufficiently whited your face: then (stifling a sigh or two and—he at first corrected 'face' to 'Face' and took the 'and' over to the next line; finding 'Face' had lost its stop he inserted a pointless italic question-mark 'Face?then' without adjusting the spacing; in lines 24-5 'sweete Honor, or by what other title you please to remember her, me thinkes you are Melancholy.' he was directed to make a parenthesis of the words 'or by . . . her', so he put in the second bracket at the end and left out the first; in line 45 he altered 'pretie' to 'prerty', probably because he was directed to correct it to 'pretty'—an error of foul case, as t and r are often confused:

compare 'teturne' and 'returne' in this very play (v. vii. 7). A few other errors may be attributed to derangement of the type: for example, 'insuspect' in Act III, scene ii, line 54. Of course, A, B, D, E make a number of true corrections: it is sufficient to note 'talke' for 'take' (III. iii. 28) and the Jonsonian 'then' for 'than' (III. v. 110). The printer could not plead that he was printing from bad or disordered copy: Jonson wrote a clear and beautiful hand, and we may be sure that he prepared his manuscript with special care.

Inner forme of G

- p. 16. Probably A, E give the first state, and the imperfect reading 'He)' for 'Hedon' in iv. ii. 10 is only an accidental disturbance of the type.

Outer forme of L

There are only three variants, but they are more difficult to account for than any others in the play. B, C, D must have the first state of the stage direction in Act v, scene x, ll. 110-12; they were rearranged in A, E to correspond with the setting of the earlier stage direction at line 94. But C has 'Your wes' for 'Your Arrowes' in line 88, and 'Dotard' instead of 'dotard' in line 96. When 'Dotard' was capitalized, the type was deranged, and four letters dropped out of 'Arrowes'. this is the second state. The third state was to reset the stage direction in lines 110-12 in two lines and to restore 'Arrowes': this is found in E. Finally in A the initial of 'Dotard' was changed back to lower-case. A puzzling solution for a complicated problem.

POETASTER

- p. 195, ll. 3, 4. The printer was Richard Bishop, who printed the whole of the first volume of the 1640 Folio and put his device on the title-page of Poetaster. The imprint 'LONDON, Printed by ROBERT YOUNG' is merely an acknowledgement of the copyright which he had acquired in 1630. (Dr. W. W. Greg.) Bishop's imprint appears in all the other plays printed in this volume and also on the general title-page. It was necessary to put his device on the title-page of Poetaster; in the other plays he puts only an ornament.

SEJANUS

- p. 330. Dr. W. W. Greg (privately) and Professor H. de Vocht in his edition of the Quarto (Louvain, 1935) have pointed out that the title-page with the imprint 'by G. Ellde' is not a cancel, but a first state of the page. The printer took out the final e of his name and did not adjust the spacing; he left an ugly gap between the 'by' and the 'G.'. Possibly he meant to take out the second l as well, for he usually spelt his name 'Eld', but he omitted to do this.

ADDITIONAL NOTE TO VOLUME V

- p. 148. To the three large-paper copies of the 1616 Folio which contain the reset quire Y y, two other copies may be added—the copy formerly at Britwell, now in America, and the Hoe-Huntington copy at Pasadena, described by Mr. George W. Whiting in Modern Language Notes, vol. xlviii, 1933, pages 537–8.
